D. C. Rents Held Exempt From New Federal Act

Measure, If Signed, Will Affect Charges In Maryland and Virginia Suburbs

The new Federal Rent Control Act, expected to be signed by President Truman today, will have no effect on rent prices within the District.

Such assurance was given District tenants by Rent Control Administrator Robert F. Cogswell yesterday, as he told The Post, "I don't feel that we have to follow the line of that law at all."

The new law, which will apply to the Greater Washington suburbs in Virginia and Maryland, will allow voluntary rent increases up to 15 per cent if leases are granted to run through 1948.

Exempted from that Act, the District will continue to control its rents under the present District of Columbia Emergency Rent Control law, which as now written is effective through 1947. An amendment now before Congress would extend it through March 31, 1948.

Administrator Cogswell, who said he had given some thought to the question whether the effects of the new Federal rent control provisions should have any influence on his decisions in the District, explained his conclusions:

"Congress apparently felt that the present District Emergency Rent Control Act gives sufficient consideration to increased costs, taxes and maintenance. In passing the original act they had in mind that rents here would be increased from time to time, as they have been."

"Under our District act, there doesn't have to be a hardship for the landlord to receive increases, and if any rents have been shown to be unduly low, we have given some relief. Our act has not prohibited increases, but merely unreasonable increases."

Truman Likely to Sign And Denounce Rent Bill

President Truman, although reportedly undecided as recently as Saturday, probably will sign the weakened rent control extension bill today to prevent rent ceilings from expiring entirely at midnight, but will issue a statement denouncing the measure in strong terms.

The bill, which cleared Congress on June 19 after the leadership made clear that it was "this or nothing," continues rent control until March 1, 1948, but allows "permissive" 15-per-cent increases where landlord and tenant agree to a lease continuing the higher rental to the end of 1948.

This, however, is only one of the provisions of the legislation that are expected to draw the President's criticism. He reportedly is equally or more opposed to the inclusion in the bill of a section immediately lifting controls on all commercial construction except that of amusement places, and one depriving permanent hotel tenants of the benefits of even weakened continued ceilings.

Five Shipwrecked Fishermen Saved From Pacific Isle

San Diego, Calif., June 29 (AP).—Five shipwrecked fishermen, their clothing in rags and their bodies blackened by tropical sun, were reported in "fair condition" today after nearly six weeks on a tiny Pacific island off the coast of Mexico.

First word of the five men, missing with the fishing boat Thistle since May 19, was received last night.

The tuna clipper Normandie of San Diego radioed that it was standing by off the five-square mile Clipperton Island, 1700 miles south of here and 500 miles off the coast of Mexico.

The Navy planned to send aid. The Coast Guard here said the men, who lived on salvaged rations from the wrecked boat, were from San Pedro.

Swipes Pole Backing Up

Boy, 3½, Drives Father's Car 150 Yards; Cost—$1 a Yard

O. P. Troup Photo

Joey Went "Driving," Janet Stayed Home . . . .

Joey Voelker, age 3½, is probably Greater Washington's youngest automobile driver.

But his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Voelker, 1300 Dale dr., Silver Spring, think he ought to be more careful—especially when he "drives" their new 1946 Buick.

Joey, when his parents weren't around, climbed in the family sedan at 7 p. m. Saturday, backed it from its parking place on Midwood rd. into busy Dale dr.

He made a perfect right turn onto Dale, his mother says, but—

In the short, 150-yard motor trip, he sideswiped a telephone pole, backed up a steep embankment and stopped with the back end of the car atop a 3-foot brick wall.

It will cost Dr. Voelker, a dentist, approximately $150 to get the car back into shape.

"Joey always liked to tinker with mechanical things," Mrs. Voelker said yesterday.

Later, he explained: "I wanted to go by-by and go down town in daddy's new car."

Exactly how Joey managed to drive the car remains a mystery.

Truman Holds Civil Rights A Key to Peace

U. S. at a Turning Point In Equality Guarantees, President Tells NAACP

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Reporter

World peace and the checking of totalitarianism depend in part upon America's success in protecting civil rights regardless of race, creed or color, President Truman said yesterday.

In an address at the Lincoln Memorial climaxing the 38th annual conference of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the President delivered a firm appeal for tolerance as a requisite for true democracy.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) and Walter White, NAACP secretary, who preceded Mr. Truman at the speaker's stand, spelled out a denunciation of lynchings and race violence which the President touched upon in less direct terms.

5,000 Attend

A crowd estimated by Park Police at 5000 attended the program. A light shower broke through the bright sunshine a half hour before the President's arrival, but the rain was over well in advance of the Rev. Stephen G. Spottswood's invocation at 4 p. m.

Asserting that he believes this country has reached a turning point in its efforts to guarantee freedom and equality to all, the President emphasized and reemphasized that he was referring to "all Americans."

"There is no justifiable reason for discrimination because of ancestry, or religion, or race or color," he said.

"Many of our people still suffer the indignity of insult, the harrowing fear of intimidation and, I regret to say, the threat of physical injury and mob violence. We

Atom Control Bound to Fail, Say Scientists

World State Only Solution, Einstein Committee Avers

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Princeton, N. J., June 29.—The emergency committee of atomic scientists headed by Albert Einstein declared today that atomic energy can be controlled for peace only within the framework of a world government.

The group said that discussions in the United Nations looking toward an international agreement outlawing the atomic bomb cannot succeed.

Einstein has frequently appealed for a world government, and several of his colleagues on the committee have indicated their sympathy with the idea, but today was the first formal declaration from the group demanding "creation of a supra-national government." Restriction of national sovereignties is necessary to maintain the peace, they said.

8 Scientists on Committee

The declaration was also the first to be signed by the committee, comprised of eight of the Nation's most outstanding atomic scientists, asserting that the U. N. atomic control treaty conferences would be fruitless.

The statement was released at a special press conference presided over by Einstein and Dr. Harold Urey, Nobel prize-winning physicist who is vice chairman of the committee.

During more than a year of discussions at the U. N., "hopes for international agreement on control of atomic energy have come to nothing," the statement said. It went on to ask, rhetorically:

"Can thoughtful and well-informed men any longer expect fruitful agreements to come out of the discussions now going on in the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission?"

Urey added that the committee

First for Free State

Maryland Sales Levy, Boost In Gas Tax to Start at Midnight

Starting tonight at midnight, residents of Maryland will be required to hand over an additional two cents with every dollar purchase.

At the same time, an additional one cent a gallon tax on gasoline becomes effective, boosting the State tax to five cents a gallon, and increasing the total Federal and State tax on gasoline in Maryland to 8½ cents.

The sales tax, first in the Free State's history, will be levied at the following rate:

1. No charge on sales under nine cents.
2. One cent on sales from nine to 50 cents, inclusive.
3. Two cents from 51 cents to $1.
4. One cent additional on each of in excess of $1.

The law, passed after a bitter fight in the State Legislature, exempts the following items from the sales tax:

Food for home use; prescriptions of physicians or medicines compounded by druggists; amusement tickets; transportation and communication services; advertising space; new or used motor vehicles; crutches and other artificial appliances; sales to the State or its political subdivisions; gasoline and liquid fuel; professional insurance or personal service transactions; live stock, poultry feed; sales to other manufacturers, producers, wholesalers or retail merchants for purpose of resale, and sales to persons operating a nonprofit religious, charitable, scientific, literary or educational institution.

Merchants are required to have licenses for the tax collections.

License applications may be obtained from the Circuit Court in the Montgomery County Courthouse at Rockville, and at the Prince Georges County clerk's office in the courthouse at Upper Marlboro.

District merchants, pondering their role in the nearby State's tax collections, have been invited to a forum meeting on the tax sponsored by the District Board of Trade Wednesday at 2 p. m. in the auditorium of the United States Chamber of Commerce, 1615 H st. nw.

Soviet Blocks Integrated Aid Program

Deadlock Termed Complete; Russia Wants Nations' Needs Merely Listed for U.S.

(Compiled from Wire Service Dispatches)

Paris, June 29.—Russia today formally opposed any "all-embracing economic program" for Europe and her position has completely deadlocked the Big Three Conference on the Marshall plan.

Russia's views were stated in an announcement transmitted from Moscow by Tass, the official Russian news agency. The official French Press Agency declared that the Russian stand gave the ministers "no more than the weakest chances of reaching agreement."

Tass said Moscow opposed Anglo-French proposals for an overall rehabilitation program on the ground that this would interfere with internal affairs and violate the sovereignty of individual European countries.

Tass suggested that the ministers accept a five-point plan put forth by Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov at the conference. Tass declared that the task of the conferees was to decide merely the amount of financial aid needed from America and whether such aid could be obtained from the United States.

Molotov's Proposal Outlined

1. Establish the needs of European countries on the basis of reports submitted by each of them.
2. Establish the possibility of receiving American economic aid and help European countries get it.
3. Give all European countries a hand in working out the economic program, rather than permit the three principal powers alone to make the major decision.
4. In working out the program, give preference to those European countries which suffered German occupation and helped the Allied victory over the Axis.
5. Exclude fundamental issues over Germany from consideration because they are exclusively the concern of the Council of Foreign Ministers.

Differences Now in Open

Previous unofficial reports from the conference had disclosed a wide measure of disagreement on how to implement the Marshall plan between the Western powers and the Soviet, but today's announcements by Tass and Agence France Presse brought the differences into the open, more or less officially.

The French announcement apparently was inspired by the French Foreign Office, United Press said, in retaliation for the Tass report on the supposedly secret proceedings.

"The ministers have arrived at an impasse where in any event they have no more than the weakest chances of reaching agreement," the French agency said.

The agency accused the Russians of attempting to follow a procedure which would wreck the conference.

The AFP quoted an authorized member of the British delegation as saying, "We have come to the critical phase. We cannot know what will come of it. The opposition between our point of view and the Russians is complete."

According to Tass, the Russians expressed "grave doubts" about a

Mississippi Now Highest In 103 Years

Record 39.2 Mark At St. Louis Hits Many More Homes; Levee Work Rushed

St. Louis, June 29 (AP).—The giant Mississippi River surged to its highest peak in 103 years today forcing additional hundreds of persons from their homes as reinforcements were rushed in for last-ditch efforts to save what levees remained standing.

The stage here reached 39.20, just over the previous 100-year high of 39.14 set in 1944, and Harry F. Wahlgren, United States Meteorologist, said the river would reach at least 39.5 tomorrow morning. The all-time high here was recorded in 1844 at 41.3 and Wahlgren said there was no doubt that the extreme record would stand.

Damage in this area alone reached $8,500,000 while the total cost of the flood in the four-State area of Missouri, Illinois, Nebraska and Iowa ranged well over 100 million dollars.

U. S. Army engineers called for all available volunteers and soldiers in their struggle to save two levees termed "very critical"—both on the Illinois side, one just north of St. Louis and the other 100 miles south near Chester, Ill.

In St. Louis alone the number of homeless was estimated between 600 and 1000.

Water poured into the lower sections of Alton, Chester and East St. Louis, Ill.

Railroads and highways north, south and west along the rivers were closed when flood water washed out or inundated tracks and roads.

More than 336,000 acres of rich farmland were under water between Louisiana, Mo., 100 miles north, and Cairo, Ill., at the mouth of the Ohio River, and at least 40,000 more acres were expected to go under if the two critical levees on the Illinois side broke.

Farther up the rivers—at St. Joseph, Mo., on the Missouri River, and at Ottumwa, Iowa., on the Des Moines—new crests were rushing downstream and observers predicted both the Missouri and Mississippi would remain out of their banks for at least 10 days.

The danger in Iowa and the upper Mississippi was further aggravated by weekend rains in Iowa, Illinois and Missouri.

Kentucky Girl Drowns

Pineville, Ky., June 29 (AP).—Workers today began clearing debris dumped yesterday by a series of flash floods and torrential rain which reportedly took one life and caused damage estimated unofficially at more than one million dollars.

Pineville police said the body of Alneima Jean Johnson, 19, was found on a drift.

Newsmen Promised 'Liberty' in Hungary

Budapest, June 29 (U.P.).—Minister of Information Erno Mihalyfi announced in an official statement today that foreign correspondents will be granted the "utmost liberty" in Hungary.

Mihalyfi also said that officials were studying possible revision of the year-old law under which foreign correspondents might be sentenced to death for discrediting the nation.

Court Fights Brewing

20-Fold Increase in Strikes Predicted by AFL Council

By the United Press

AFL General Counsel Joseph Padway predicted last night that the new Taft-Hartley labor reform law would produce a "twenty-fold" increase in strikes that would put the National Labor Relations Board five years behind in its work.

He indicated the AFL was prepared to take the lead in a Nation-wide court fight against the statute. And he hinted that some of its provisions might be ignored deliberately by AFL unions to hasten a test of its constitutionality.

Padway made his forecast after a two-day conference with about 100 AFL attorneys. They mapped plans for court action to be presented to the union's international officers here July 9.

He said a second conference with union attorneys probably would be held July 25 either at San Francisco or Los Angeles.

A third meeting will be held in October to check up on the first three months of operations under the law.

Padway said a widespread outbreak of strikes was likely in order to get labor-management disputes before the NLRB as quickly as possible. He said these cases probably would pile up so fast that within a year, the agency would be encountering a five-year work backlog. Some lawyers felt certain unions could get along without any contracts with employers, and thus could bypass the new statute. These would be very strong craft unions, such as the International Typographical Union.

Padway said the no-contract plan might work this way:

"The typos might say, 'we don't want an agreement. We'll set up conditions of employment. If you don't want to meet them, we'll just go away.'"

A legal fight probably will be made against the law's restrictions on union health and welfare funds.

Most of the lawyers were extremely critical of the provisions requiring union leaders to file affidavits with the NLRB declaring they are not Communists. Failure to do so would deprive their unions of bargaining rights.

"This approaches the 'thought police' as they existed in Germany and Japan," Padway said.

He predicted some attorneys would advise their unions to ignore the requirement as "an insult and denial of rights."

CIO Plans All-Out Ballot Fight in Ohio

Columbus, Ohio, June 29 (AP). The National director of the CIO Political Action Committee today outlined a block-by-block ballot box battle in retaliation for passage of National and Ohio labor regulation bills.

Director Jack Kroll, also president of the Ohio CIO Council, told a mass meeting of CIO unionists protesting Ohio's Van Aken bill and Congress' Taft-Hartley measure:

"The time is now. We need 50,000 Ohio CIO volunteers to work in their own blocks to get voters to the ballot box.

"We've got debts to pay and don't you forget it."

Four Inquiries Loom On Crime Complaints; Action Sought on Hill

Concealed From Public

600 Robbery Cases Never Properly Listed by D. C. Police

By John Singerhoff
Post Reporter

Robbery is not always a "crime" in Washington.

If a footpad sneaks out of a dark alley, knocks you to the ground with a rock or his fist and makes off with your pocketbook, you're pretty well convinced you've been robbed.

But more than 600 people who reported they were robbed between July 1, 1946, and May 31, 1947, were wrong—at least so far as the Police Department is concerned.

The Washington Post yesterday following an exhaustive survey disclosed that cases of persons who said they were "yoked," "flimflammed," "beaten" and robbed at gunpoint, never have been listed as "crimes" in the official statistics of the Metropolitan Police Department.

Failure to list these offenses has kept knowledge of many lawless acts from the police force as a whole, from the public and from formal statistics of crimes committed and cases solved.

The Post discovered more than 300 cases marked "hold, do not send in" on precinct volume books, and hidden "C" and "M" files containing more than 300 reports in the Detective Bureau Robbery squad.

CAPT. RHODA MILLIKEN

These cases had not been entered on the record of the department's statistical bureau as required by regulations.

Some Marked 'Confidential'

Some of the cases not listed in police statistics were undoubtedly false reports, or made by intoxicated persons whose accuracy was questioned by police. Other cases were marked "confidential" at the request of the complainant to avoid embarrassing publicity.

The majority of the concealed cases appeared to be hard-to-solve robberies for varying amounts, victims who were from out-of-town, or cases where the citizen could not identify assailants.

Some typical cases The Post found tucked away in Robbery Squad files are:

The robbery of Police Capt. Rhoda J. Milliken, commanding officer of the Women's Bureau.

Captain Milliken, 51, of 3315 N st. nw., was accosted by a purse snatcher at 12:35 a. m., May 11 of this year, within two blocks of the Women's Bureau at 5th and P sts. nw.

Her assailant snatched from her arm a black plastic pocketbook containing $6 in cash, her police captain's badge and personal papers.

Barrett Promises Full Cooperation With The Post in Clearing Up Cases

By Robert Bruskin and N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporters

Investigation of reasons why the Metropolitan Police have been hiding crime complaints was decided upon yesterday by Chairman C. Douglas Buck (R., Del.) of the Senate District Committee.

Two other local organizations announced they, too, intended to look into the "pocketed" crime reports uncovered by a Washington Post investigation.

Chief of Detectives Robert J. Barrett, who is to become Police Superintendent Tuesday, promised to issue a statement.

"I want you to know that I will detail any amount of men to go along with your men to investigate any case that you have in mind," he said.

The Post found more than 600 robbery complaints during the last 11 months had been hidden in the Detective Bureau and at precincts, mostly at the request of the Detective Bureau.

Senator Buck said at his home near Wilmington, Del.:

"If conditions are such as reported by The Post investigators, I expect and I will recommend to the District Committee that the District Commissioners send us a report on how the condition came about and who is responsible."

"Damn fast" action was demanded by Representative F. Edward Hebert (D., La.) to discover if the figures were being doctored deliberately. Hebert, a member of the House District Committee, instigated the police investigation of 1941 which resulted in a shake-up of the department.

John Russell Young, president of the board of District Commissioners, could not be reached all day for comment.

Justice Associations to Meet

John A. Remon, president of the Washington Criminal Justice Association, issued a call for a special meeting of the organization's executive board "after careful study of The Post disclosures."

The meeting, he said, has been scheduled tentatively for Wednesday afternoon, in his offices, at 725 13th st. nw.

"The Criminal Justice Association is vitally concerned over whether criminal reports are being withheld," Remon declared, in announcing the meeting call.

"The police teletype is our sole source of criminal cases and if we are not getting full reports over the teletype we are not getting a true picture of crime in the Nation's Capital," he declared.

Members of the association's executive board requested to meet in the matter to decide "what, if any, action should be taken by us." Remon said, include:

Honorary president of the association is Eugene Meyer, owner of The Post, who will be "especially

Here Is Text Of Barrett's Explanation

Here follows the complete text of Police Inspector Robert J. Barrett's explanaion concerning disclosures by The Post investigators that present system of handling crime reports in the Police Department has resulted in widespread "pocketing" of such reports from official public records.

I HAVE today requested Capt. Robert S. Bryant, assistant chief of detectives, and Lieut. Robert V. Murray, the head of the Robbery Squad, to give me a full report on the methods employed of handling complaints of crimes and alleged crimes. This is to cover the manner in which reported crimes are carried in the Detective Bureau.

At present, I am the Chief of Detectives and my jurisdiction is confined to supervision over the men in the Detective Bureau. For that reason my order of today is limited to the Bureau. On Tuesday I am to be sworn in as Major and Superintendent of Police, at which time I shall direct a com-

Pair Flees in Victim's Auto

Bethesda Couple Held Up In Home; $4000 Loot Taken

Two men held up a Bethesda man and his wife in their home yesterday morning and fled in his car with an estimated $4000 in loot, chiefly jewelry.

The victims were Nathan Cosman, 7312 Bradley blvd., associated with the Kenyon Motor Co., 320 Florida ave. N., and his wife, Sarah.

Awakened by knocks at 8 o. m., Cosman answered the door.

"Are you Mr. Cosman?" the pair asked. "Yes, I'm Cosman, he replied. One man pulled a pistol from beneath his coat, the pair then forced Cosman back into his living room.

As Mrs. Cosman, awakened by the voices, stepped out, they forced them both at gunpoint into their bedroom, made them lie face down on the bed, and tied them up with belts, neckties and towels.

Going about their work with nervous speed, they took a $3000 diamond ring from Mrs. Cosman's finger and a box of her jewelry from a dresser drawer, but missed her watch and some otheer article loose in the drawer.

They found Cosman's watch in a top dresser drawer, however, and $45 in cash in a trouser pocket.

They also took Cosman's car keys, lying on a table, and fled in his car, parked in the driveway. In the back of the car, Cosman said, was a $50 motor he had just purchased, which he had forgotten to take out of the car the preceding night.

Cosman succeeded in freeing himself about 10 mintes after the stickup men left, released his wife and called police.

They described the men as being about 26 and 24 years of age, both of medium build and dark hair.

The older, who flourished the pistol, wore a light brown sports jacket with dark sleeves, a gray felt hat and blue trousers, the Cosmans said.

The younger one, who rifled the bedroom, also wore a sports jacket.

Both men wore cloth gloves.

Cosman's car is a 1946 black Dodge club coupe, but police last night did not know what the license tags were as Cosman did not recall what the dealer's numbers were on the car he was using.

Swift Action of United States Saved Greece, Writer Is Told

By M. W. Fodor

(Post reporter, authority on the Balkans and the Near East, author of "South of Hitler," "Plot and Counterplot in Central Europe," and other works.)

Athens, June 29.—"The swift action of the United States has saved Greece."

These words were uttered to your correspondent by no less a person than Paul I, King of the Hellenes. He received your correspondent in his modest, book-decked study. Though he is 48 years old, the athletic-built, extremely good looking King appears to be 10 years younger than his actual age. Paul is 6 feet 2 inches and broadshouldered, with an energetic face bearing deep hard-grooved lines; a determined chin and an intelligent forehead. As I knew his father, I mentioned to Paul that he looked very much like King Constantine.

"Yes, perhaps. Yes, if you would add an upturned moustache to the upper lip . . . In fact my son, Crown Prince Constantine, looks exactly like his grandfather," added King Paul.

Seated behind a huge but simple desk, King Paul looked like an English country squire, so much so that he wears even the monocle as would an English aristocrat. This monocle, somehow, together with the naughty twist round his determined lips, make him look somewhat dandy-like.

The King was dressed in the elegant spotless white uniform of a Greek admiral—"nauarchos"—with the crossed swords and huge star on the golden epaulette. His sleeves were upturned in the summer fashion of the British navy, and the rolled-up sleeves exposed on his left arm the blue tattooed figure of a large flat fish. The tattoo mark originates from his navy days . . .

The not too large room, where the King received me, was surrounded by bookshelves at least on two sides, these bookcases rising right up to the ceiling. Along the board of the bookcase there were family portraits, photos not even framed, just covered by glass. Behind the King were the photos of his father, King Constantine I, with a fierce upturned moustache, and lean, ermine-dressed Queen Sophie, his mother, who was the sister of Kaiser Wilhelm II.

On his right, again along the bookcase, was the charming photo of his wife, Friedericka of Braunschweig, now Queen Fredericka. On the desk there was a large silver inkpot, two heavy ashtrays, a few documents and books. During the audience, which lasted 1 hour, the King smoked just one American cigarette, which he took out of a bulky, heavy silver cigarette case.

Praises United States Aid

He turned to me:

"Without the aid of the United States we would be lost. For this reason, we are most grateful for the help extended to us." He speaks a fluent and beautiful English, but with a decided English "college" accent. Later, when talking about the future, he expressed fears as to whether two different mentalities, such as American and Greek, will understand each other.

The he added: "There may be two mentalities, but we must understand each other."

The King expressed the belief that the internal situation could be easily settled, if there were no foreign intervention.

While I was waiting to be announced to the King by his aide, a lieutenant colonel, I was able to cast a glance on the 7-year-old Crown Prince Constantine, who was beating a drum, learning quite well the rhythm of army druming. The King talked to me a great deal about his children and the educational problems involved in the bringing up of royal breed.

"My wife and her brother were educated in Germany," the King told me, "at the school of a certain Herr Hahn in Salem, Baden. The school was founded by this pedagogist as a progressive experiment, and was originally housed in the palace of Prince Max of Baden (a progressive German duke during the Empire who was the last Chancellor under Kaiser Wilhelm II). As Mr. Hahn had Jewish blood, he had to leave Hitler's Germany, and founded a school, following his old principles, at Gordontown, in the north of Scotland. My wife asked Herr Hahn to send a good teacher for my children, and at present Mr. Norman Pares is educating the Crown Prince and his sister, based on the progressive ideas of Herr Hahn. The children have to learn about democracy and self-government at an early age; they elect their own representation, and this should give them a good basis for future democratic ideas," said the King.

King Paul then talked about life in the palace.

"I get up at 7 a. m. I play, usually, an hour or more of tennis at the Tennis Club (situated between the stadium and the Temple of the Olympean Zeus), after which I have a swim in the nearby pool. After breakfast I start my work, which lasts all day long. I spend almost my whole day in this study?"

Indeed, I noticed many people waiting for audience in the anteroom. The King, however, has a pleasant view from his window on his left into the exquisite park of the small palace. Towering cypresses, sturdy palm trees and incredibly flower-rich oleanders adorn the grounds.

The King told me that Princess Sophia, age 9, and her brother, Crown Prince Constantine, age 7, are now lunching with him and the Queen. The 4-year-old Princess Irene naturally has her meals in the nursery.

Then the King remembered his own youth.

"King Constantine was strict with us. We had to do 2 hours' hard athletic or military work in the morning, after which we joined him for breakfast. We look forward to having the children with us for breakfast. This gives me a chance to see them; I am busy the whole long day and by the time I finish work they must go to bed. Thus I plan to follow my father's schedule and have the children breakfast with us."

The Royal family now lives in a small gray and white marble house, known as the "Palace of the Crown Prince." The original royal palace was built by King Otto I 100 years ago. Though it was built of beautiful Pentelic marble, the Munich architect imitated the royal palace in the Bavarian Capital, and the old palace, indeed, looks like a Bavarian atrocity of art. The later is now used as Parliament and also as offices of the Ministries of War and Supplies.

The Crown Prince's palace is behind the Amalia Gardens. It was built by George I of Slesvig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Gluecksburg (the grandfather of the present King) for his son Constantine. When George I died in 1913, Constantine remained in the small palace which thus has become the royal palace.

It is a fair-sized country house. The rooms are cool and the furniture simple, the only decorations worth mentioning being the nice Persian and Greek carpets and the many pictures. Most of these pictures are portraits of Danish and Greek Kings. There are some battle pictures, like the one in the waiting room which depicts the naval battle of Navarino.

I asked the King whether the children remembered their old days in Athens. The answer was in the negative. "The Crown Prince was 9 months old when the Germans invaded Greece and we were forced to leave."

We talked about many subjects, but the King said that "being a constitutional King I must not make any public utterances without previous consultation with my government."

When the audience came to a termination, the King gave a firm handshake and expressed the hope that "the American-Hellenic cooperation will prove to be a success.'

Mrs. Peron Visits Fair

Milan, Italy, June 29 (AP).—Mrs. Juan D. Peron, wife of Argentina's President, visited the Milan Fair today, but the crush of the welcoming throngs was so great that she did not leave her motor car to view the exhibits. It was estimated that 200,000 persons jammed the grounds.

4 Englishmen Hurt in Attack Near Tel Aviv

Jerusalem, June 29 (AP).—Four British military men were wounded today in an attack on a sunbathing party at Hertzynia, north of Tel Aviv, in a continuation of reprisals by the Jewish underground for the disappearance of a 16-year-old Jew.

Two officers and two soldiers were wounded when 12 armed Jews attacked the sunbathing party, an official announcement said. All the attackers fled under cover of a smoke bomb.

The attack occurred 18 hours after the fatal wounding last night of four members of the British military in what members of the underground Stern Gang said was retaliation for the disapearance of Alexander Rubowitz on May 6.

Stern Gang members say the youth was put to death after his abduction by a secret group of British police officers hitting back at the Jewish underground.

Palestine authorities have been unable to find any trace of Rubowitz.

British Maj. Roy A. Farran, 26, who escaped 10 days ago from Allenby Barracks where he was held in connection with the Rubowitz case, surrendered this morning.

Farran, holder of 26 army decorations, was reported to be a member of a clandestine Palestine police antiterrorist squad.

The United Nations Palestine Inquiry Commission will visit Galilee tomorrow.

Several U. N. representatives members today visited Rehovoth, where they lunched with Dr. Chaim Weizmann, former Zionist president due to appear before the commission soon.

The commission held a special session tonight and 9 of its 11 members adopted a resolution condemning the "acts of violence which have occurred in Palestine" since the body arrived two weeks ago. The Australian and Indian members of the group abstained from voting.

Resignation Refused

Jerusalem, June 29.—Mrs. Golda Meyerson, head of the political department of the Jewish Agency in Palestine, submitted her resignation today because of illness.

The executive refused to accept her resignation but permitted Mrs. Meyerson an extended leave for recuperation.

Indonesians, Dutch Confer On U. S. Note

Bativia, Java, June 29 (AP)—Dutch and Indonesian officials conferred today over the United States note which both sides welcomed as halting the immediate threat of war in the Netherlands East Indies.

The Dutch denied officially an Indonesian claim that military operations were to begin Monday against Republican strongholds, but a reliable informant said the American message was delivered yesterday barely in time to permit the Dutch to countermand orders for a general attack.

The Dutch and Indonesians met at the palace of Dutch Governor General Hubertus J. Van Mook to consider effects of the note, which urged the Indonesian Republic to cooperate immediately in formation of an interim government and promised to discuss economic aid.

United States Consul General Walter Foote urged Republican leaders to reply promptly in order to remove the deadlock in negotiations.

There was no word that a reply had been sent, but President Soekarno hailed the note as easing the crisis "to a great extent."

Pleasure over the United States action was plainly apparent in Dutch circles.

Marshall Plan Hope of World, Rooks Asserts

By the United Press

Maj. Gen. Lowell W. Rooks, UNRRA director general, said last night that the "hope of the future world" lies in discussions of Secretary of State George C. Marshall's plan for European reconstruction and similar plans for other parts of the world.

In a statement in connection with the closing of all UNRRA missions in Europe, Rooks said that as UNRRA's work draws to a close, "the threat of hunger, and the possibility of general economic collapse remain before us."

"Redoubled efforts are now necessary to retain and augment the benefits won by UNRRA," he said.

Pledges Support of Parley.

He pledged his support of the current Marshall plan discussions in Paris between the French, Russian and British foreign ministers and said:

"In the conferences on the economic situation of Europe, recently proposed by Secretary Marshall, and on similar approaches with respect to other parts of the globe, lies the hope of the future world."

UNRRA is "indeed gratified" to see that recovery is now being approached on a global basis, he said. From a long-range point of view, he added, the world is too closely integrated for "piecemeal or local" expenditures to be successful.

Rooks also sent messages to UNRRA member governments in which he thanked supplying nations for their "generous and effective support," and also expressed appreciation to countries receiving aid for their cooperation.

Reviewing UNRRA's work since it was set up in 1943, he said the relief agency, in delivering nearly three billion dollars of supplies to 17 war-torn countries, has "held the line" and staved off starvation and economic collapse. But hunger and malnutrition have not been eradicated and economic recovery has not been achieved yet, he added.

He said that while UNRRA has managed to "steer clear of politics," there are existing "political cleavages" which impede economic progress.

Balkan Peace Plan Is Given 50-50 Chance

Lake Success, June 29 (AP).—A majority of United Nations Security Council delegates declared today there was a 50-50 chance that Russia would refrain from vetoing United States proposals for restoration of peace in the Balkans to avoid a major crisis.

This view was advanced in the face of a United States demand that the Security Council use force, if necessary, to prevent Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria from sheltering and supporting armed bands that might violate Greek territory.

The crisis is expected to be reached when the Security Council votes on a United States proposal to keep a two-year U. N. vigil over the Balkans, right in the Soviet backyard. The proposal is based on the recommedations of the Balkan Commission.

American officials said Russia would have a difficult time justifying a veto if border incidents continued.

40,000 Reds Still Bivouac In Hungary

By Daniel De Luce

Budapest, June 29 (By Mail) (AP).—The Russian army that swarmed across Hungary in 1945 with 1,000,000 booty-hungry soldiers is relatively a military skeleton today.

Fewer than 40,000 Russians, according to official sources, are here in Hungary.

Only 5000 troops—approximately two transportation regiments—are expected by Hungarian officials to remain after the peace treaty with Hungary takes effect.

That peacetime Russian remnant will guard a supply line to Austria and the legal responsibility for its upkeep will be on the Soviet government. At present, Hungary is spending more than $8,000,000 a year on its occupiers.

Regardless of whether they love or hate Communist Russia, all Hungarians have reason to be thankful they have been ruled by one allied power instead of four since the war because Hungary has fared much better than Germany or Austria.

Soviet troops behave like hermits toward the people here. They are under orders not to mix socially. They have not courted native girls.

Policing is done by Hungarians. Russian ground troops are confined to training as soldiers instead of cops.

Few Russians here have medals for war service. The majority resemble the teen-agers who have filled American ranks in Europe.

Russian conduct and discipline appear to have been excellent since 1945. But Hungarians are slow to forget the looting and rape during combat.

A fledgling Hungarian army, officially reckoned at 11,400 men, is in the process of organization with Soviet blessing and advice.

But British and American officers of the allied control commission know next to nothing about the Hungarian force. The Soviet command has flatly denied them permissioan to visit any Hungarian military unit.

By acquiring the Carpatho-Ukraine from Czechoslovakia, Russia obtained a postwar frontier only 140 miles across an open plain from Budapest. That nearby frontier is a geo-military fact which no Hungarian statesman in the future can afford to ignore.

Better Housing Urged

Moscow, June 29 (AP).—The Communist Party newspaper Pravda today called for better housing and more attention to the working and living conditions of laborers being recruited for Soviet industry.

An editorial declared that more than half of 3000 workers who arrived at coal mining installations in the western districts during the first quarter of this year left during the same period "principally because of unsatisfactory housing conditions, bad organization of labor and improper use of the labor force."

Chiang Forces Converge on Szepingkai

Peiping, June 29 (AP).—Chinese progovernment press reports said today that Nationalist reinforcements were closing in on ruined Szepingkai from three directions and were expected to effect a junction there as soon as they completed a severe engagement with Communists 10 miles to the south.

The usually reliable paper Hsin Min Pao said that in China proper 30,000 Communists were in positions along both sides of the Peiping-Paoting railway, which they were daming in nightly raids.

Paoting, Hopeh provincial capital 90 miles southeast of Peiping, was expecting a direct attack, but government reinforcements were en route.

406 Ukrainian Nationalists Killed by Poles

Warsaw, June 29 (AP).—The government announced today that 406 Ukrainian nationalists had been killed in a drive by the Polish Internal Security Corps to rid southeastern Poland of anti-government underground bands.

Uofficial reports said a total of 2000 Ukrainians had been killed, wounded, or captured. The ZGUkrainians, entrenched in bunkers in wooded areas, have been battling the Security forces with machine guns, grenades and mortars.

Hundreds were reported captured in the liquidation of six big Ukrainian groups by the Security Corps, aided by regular troops. Army planes were used to spot hideouts.

The official announcement said that six Ukrainians responsible for the assassination of Gen. Karol Swierczewski were among those captured in operations in the Lublin and Krakow districts and at Rzeszow, near the Czechoslovak and Russian frontiers. Swierczewski, vice minister of defense, was machine-gunned March 28.

The Security forces declared the Ukrainians were supported by Fascist remnants of underground bands trained in Munich and led by former Nazi SS officers. Military courts have been passing death sentences on those captured.

More Coal Contract Parleys Predicted

Attempt to Prevent Strike May Yield Lewis Better Offers

By the United Press

Resumption of negotiations to avert a soft coal strike July 8 was forecast by Government officials yesterday amid indications that a growing number of major producers are ready to make better wage contract offers to Miners' President John L. Lewis.

Improved offers reportedly have been made already by the U. S. Steel Corp. and the Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal Co., whose mines produce 90 million tons annually. Other operators meet here today and tomorrow to decide whether to go along.

The outlook became brighter as the Government prepared to haul down the American Flag over 2500 Federally-operated mines at 12:01 p. m. today, ending 13 months of operation under a contract with Lewis which for the first time established a miners' health and welfare fund and granted other concessions.

The pits were seized under provisions of the Smith-Connally Labor Disputes Act to avert a strike. That law—and Federal seizure powers—expire today.

With the mines back in private hands, Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenback is expected to move swiftly for peace in the coal fields.

He is scheduled to confer with his aides today and department sources said he will ask Lewis and the operators to resume bargaining talks late this week. However, he may await the outcome of Lewis' secret talks with big segments of the Northern and Western operators.

Schwellenbach has had James Dewey assigned to the coal wage dispute for the past two weeks as his special observer, mindful that when the miners' present 10-day vacation ends July 8, there may be a traditional "no contract, no work" walkout.

The U. S. Steel-Pittsburgh Consolidation offer reportedly meets Lewis' basic demand for a daily wage rate of $13.05 for eight hours of work and travel time. It is said to have split the various operator groups sharply but in years past most of the industry ultimately has followed U. S. Steel's lead.

For example, there were reports that big Illinois strip-mining interests would go along.

Lewis is said to have indicated a willingness to sign with any substantial group that will meet his demands. It is uncertain, however, whether he would sign with U. S. Steel alone.

The vacation shutdown has forced widespread lay-offs in steel, auto and other metal-working plants and by the railroads. Furloughs for more than 30,000 workers have been announced. One Government source estimated that 2,000,000 workers may be made idle for lack of fuel by mid-July if a coal strike occurs.

Government officials are concerned seriously over the dispute because of the scant 32-day supply of coal in stockpiles above ground. They said a two weeks strike after the vacation would seriously upset the national economy.

Republic Steel, Sharon Steel and Wheeling Steel also have announced production cutbacks. Wheeling Steel's curtailment will idle about 6000 workers by July 7.

Under New Law

NAM Urges Better Link With Labor

New York, June 29 (U.P.).—The National Association of Manufacturers today urged that management, in revising labor policies to conform to the Taft-Hartley Act, take all "reasonable" steps to improve relations with its employes.

NAM, in issuing the first of a series of reviews of the new labor bill to its membership, said that employers "by every word and deed" should show they are determined to work with labor under the new law "to build an era of general prosperity such as this country has never known."

The statement proposed that management in its first steps should inform all levels of management of a determination to apply the law in a spirit of moderation; fully inform employes of their rights under the law; and make sure that the community understands "industry's sincere intention" to use the law for the furtherance of industrial peace.

6 Reasons Given Why U. S. Should Stay Prosperous

Passaic, N. J., June 29 (INS).—Charles F. H. Johnson, jr., vice president and general manager of Botany Mills, gave six reasons today why prosperity in this country never has been more general and future prospects never have been brighter.

They are:

1. More people—53,300,000—are employed than at any previous time, including the war peak of 1945.

2. Average weekly wages on last June 15 were $48.83, the highest ever recorded.

3. More women are employed in industry now than at any time except at the peak of the war effort.

4. Savings of individuals, not including checking accounts or big time investments, are in excess of 154 billion dollars, which is only slightly under the wartime high.

5. This country is expected to do a business of more than 200 billion dollars in 1947, which is greater than our best wartime year when much of the production went into military requirements.

6. Dollar volume of retail sales for the first three months of 1947 was approximately 10 per cent above the level of 1946 and for May was 17 per cent above last year.

Publicly-Owned Mines, Railways, Power Advocated

Chicago, June 29 (AP).—The Progressive Citizens of America today advocated "public ownership of coal mines, railroads and electric power."

In a revision of the organization's nine-point policy program, adopted at the group's first national convention in New York last December, the PCA directors at a meeting here also indorsed "complete reversal of the Truman" foreign doctrine.

The PCA, successor of the National Citizens' Political Action Committee and the Independent Citizens' Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, was described by a spokesman as "an organization of independent voters for progressive political action."

In their statement on public ownership, the directors said it should be achieved "through the medium of independent government corporations of the TVA type and in such a way as to protect to the full the rights of labor and consumers."

Exports Called Cause of High Grain Prices

By The Associated Press

The National Association of Commodity Exchange and Allied Trades, Inc., called on the Government yesterday to tell the public that grain prices will stay high as long as "the domestic bin is scraped" for foreign exports.

This suggestion was contained in a letter to Senator Taft (R., Ohio) and Representative Wolcott of the Senate-House Economic Committee.

"Opponents of a free competitive economy," the letter said, "would have our people believe that the prices of today are the direct result of abandonment of OPA.

"The situation has not been helped by the unwillingness of Federal agencies to tell the people frankly that high prices are directly attributable to tremendous exports.

"To often these agencies have endeavored to sidestep responsibility by placing the blame on market speculation, greed for profit and a variety of other reasons."

Hollywood, June 29 (U.P.).—Mrs. Vera West, 47, film studio dress designer for many years, was found drowned today in the swimming pool of her home. Notes she left said she was tired of being "blackmailed."

British Jail Vice 'King' For Stabbing

London, June 29 (U.P.).—Fabulously wealthy Eugene Messina, who put prostitution on a five-day week, was on the way to jail today with the doubtful satisfaction of knowing his name will be mentioned on the floor of the Commons this week, a distinction accorded very few British criminals.

Messina built up an international white slave operation so efficient not one of the hundreds of girls who worked for him at one time or another would help police.

As a result, Messina was not sentenced as head of the Messina Bros. gang, reputed to have grossed over two million dollars since the war out of prostitution alone. But he received three years in connection with the stabbing of Carmelo Vassala, a member of the rival Romeo gang now also in jail.

The Messinas were reported to have leased hundreds of luxurious West End apartments. Police said their girls were only the most beautiful. They were recruited in Spain, Portugal, and France and received expensive gifts. Each girl was given a lavish wardrobe and custom-made cosmetics. They worked five days a week.

The Messinas collected nightly, using two Rolls Royces to make their rounds. On the few occasions they had trouble with a girl, razor slashing usually solved the problem.

As a result of the trial, John Foster, conservative member of Parliament, is asking that a commission inquire into organized vice in London and why the Messinas were able to evade war service.

Coalition Move to Revive Tax Reduction Bill Strikes Snag

By Jack Bell
Associated Press Staff Writer

A coalition move to revive the vetoed tax reduction bill hit a snag yesterday when Senator McClellan (D., Ark.) announced he and others will insist on attaching a community property amendment.

McClellan told a reporter he and at least three other Democratic Senators will refuse to go along with any reduction bill that does not carry authority for husbands and wives to divide their income for tax purposes.

Such a group apparently would hold the balance in overriding or sustaining a Presidential veto, if one comes.

A move to attach the community property clause in the Senate apparently would defeat any plan for quick passage by both Houses of the measure taking a four-billion-dollar slice out of individual income taxes. supporters propose to revise it to make it effective next January 1 instead of next Tuesday as was provided in the original vetoed tax cut bill.

It also might open the way for various of other proposed amendments, such as those increasing the personal exemption allowances, bringing about extended debate.

Community property laws, effective in 10 states and upheld in Federal courts, permit many couples to pay less to the Federal government by splitting their income and taking advantage of lower rates.

Senator Revercomb (R., W. Va.) said he would join in urging this provision if the bill reaches the Senate.

Senator Wherry of Nebraska, the Republican whip, said GOP leaders are sticking to plans to adjourn Congress July 26. With a stack of work ahead, he said there probably would be no time for a lengthy debate on taxes.

Wherry said, however, that the decision on whether to go ahead with the tax bill rests with Chairman Millikin (R., Colo.) of the Senate Finance Committee.

[According to the United Press, Millikin said it would reject President Truman's demand for greater relief for "the little fellow."—Editor's notes.]

Polls indicate that sufficient votes are available in the House to override a possible Presidential veto. While the President's action on a January reduction is uncertain, many in Congress feel that attachment of the community property proposal at this time would make such a veto more certain since it would subtract 800 million dollars yearly from potential revenues.

Senator Tydings (D., Md.) predicted in a broadcast that President Truman would sign the tax cut bill carrying the January 1 date if slight reductions were made in cuts for heavy income brackets and slight increases were given reductions in the lower brackets.

Slav Paper Suggests Break With Vatican

Belgrade, June 29 (Delayed) (AP).—The Communist newspaper Borba—whose editorials are often forerunners of official action—suggested today the Qugoslav government break relations with the Vatican if the "campaign of slanders against Yugoslavia" continues.

The editorial described as slanderous articles in the semiofficial Vatican papel L'Osservatore Romano, in which Borba said it was stated that no religious freedom existed in Yugoslavia and that 400,000 dependents of church charity and welfare activity had been deprived of aid by the Yugoslav government.

World Peace Partly Depends On Civil Rights, Truman Says

cannot wait another decade or another generation to remedy these evils. We must work, as never before, to cure them now."

Speaks 12 Minutes

Mr. Truman said, "We cannot, any longer, await the growth of a will to action in the slowest State or the most backward community."

Accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt and his military and naval aides, the President reached the improvised speaker's platform by way of a special approach from the north side of the Memorial.

His address took 12 minutes, about a minute longer than Mrs. Roosevelt's.

Although the hour-long program did not commence until 4 o'clock more than 2500 persons were present, the majority of them gathered near the Reflecting Pool and on the sidewalks in front of the Memorial.

The scattered distribution of the crowd gave many the impression that the total audience was two or three times the Park Police estimate of 5000.

Among those who listened to President Truman's words against intolerance were Chief Justice Fred Vinson, Attorney General Tom Clark, Fleet Admiral Chester Nimitz and Senator Arthur Capper (R., Kans.). They sat beside the President, who spoke from the Memorial's midway-level platform.

3000 Gather 'Round

Below, 1500 delegates and guests of the NAACP conference sat in folding chairs. Upward of 3000 more listeners stood on the walkways or sat on the grassy approaches.

The United States, said the Chief Executive, must set the example for "desperate populations of battle-ravaged countries" lest they "surrender to the false security offered so temptingly by totalitarian regimes."

"Our case for democracy should be as strong as we can make it. It should rest on practical evidence that we have been able to put our own house in order."

The President's speech was punctuated liberally with applause. So was Mrs. Roosevelt's. She said there can be no security if you have fear and we must see to it that things which create fear are done away with.

"We cannot live with the blot of lynchings in our land," she declared.

Senator Morse urged extension of the ballot to all, irrespective of color or the areas in which people live. "No police state, Fascist or Communist, can match the guarantees of individual liberty, human rights and justice by law of our democracy," he asserted.

Text of Talk By Truman To NAACP

The text of President Truman's address yesterday at the thirty-eighth annual conference of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People:

Gentlemen:

I AM HAPPY to be present at the closing session of the thirty-eighth annual conference of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. The occasion of meeting with you here at the Lincoln Memorial affords me the opportunity to congratulate the association upon its effective work for the improvement of our democratic processes.

I should like to talk to you briefly about civil rights and human freedom. It is my deep conviction that we have reached a turning point in the long history of our country's efforts to guarantee freedom and equality to all our citizens. Recent events in the United States and abroad have made us realize that it is more important today than ever before to insure that all Americans enjoy these rights.

And when I say all Americans—I mean all Americans.

The civil rights laws written in the early years of our republic, and the traditions which have been built upon them, are precious to us. Those laws were drawn up with the memory still fresh in men's minds of the tyranny of an absentee government. They were written to protect the citizens against any possible tyrannical act by the new government in this country.

But we cannot be content with a civil liberties program which emphasizes only the need of protection against the possibility of tyranny by the Government.

We cannot stop there.

We must keep moving forward, with new concepts of civil rights to safeguard our heritage. The extension of civil rights today means, not protection of the people against the Government, but protection of the people by the Government.

We must make the Federal Government a friendly, vigilant defender of the rights and equalities of all Americans. And again I mean all Americans.

AS AMERICANS, we believe that every man should be free to live his life as he wishes. He should be limited only by his responsibility to his fellow countrymen. If this freedom is to be more than a dream, each man must be guaranteed equality of opportunity. The only limit to an American's achievement should be his ability, his industry and his character. The rewards for his effort should be determined only by these truly relevant qualities.

Our immediate task is to remove the last remnants of the barriers which stand between millions of our citizens and their birthright. There is no justifiable reason for discrimination because of ancestry, or religion, or race, or color.

We must not tolerate such limitations on the freedom of any of our people and on their enjoyment of the basic rights which every citizen in a truly democratic society must possess.

Every man should have the right to a decent home, the right to an education, the right to adequate medical care, the right to a worthwhile job, the right to an equal share in the making of public decisions through the ballot, and the right to a fair trial in a fair court.

We must insure that these rights—on equal terms—are enjoyed by every citizen.

To these principles I pledge my full and continued support.

MANY of our people still suffer the indignity of insult, the harrowing fear of intimidation, and, I regret to say, the threat of physical injury and mob violence. The prejudice and intolerance in which these evils are rooted still exist. The conscience of our Nation, and the legal machinery which enforces it, have not yet secured to each citizen full freedom from fear.

We cannot wait another decade or another generation to remedy these evils. We must work, as never before, to cure them now. The aftermath of war and the desire to keep faith with our Nation's historic principles make the need a pressing one.

The support of desperate populations of battle-ravaged countries must be won for the free way of life. We must have them as allies in our continuing struggle for the peaceful solution of the world's problems. Freedom is not an easy lesson to teach, nor an easy cause to sell, to peoples beset by every kind of privation. They may surrender to the false security offered so temptingly by totalitarian regimes unless we can prove the superiority of democracy.

Our case for democracy should be as strong as we can make it. It should rest on practical evidence that we have been able to put our own house in order.

For these compelling reasons, we can no longer afford the luxury of a leisurely attack upon prejudice and discrimination. There is much that State and local governments can do in providing positive safeguards for civil rights. But we cannot, any longer, await the growth of a will to action in the slowest State or the most backward community.

Our national government must show the way.

This is a difficult and complex undertaking. Federal laws and administrative machineries must be improved and expanded. We must provide the government with better tools to do the job. As a first step, I appointed an advisory committee on civil rights last December. Its members, 15 distinguished private citizens, have been surveying our civil rights difficulties and needs for several months. I am confident that the product of their work will be a sensible and vigorous program for action by all of us.

WE MUST STRIVE to advance civil rights wherever it lies within our power. For example, I have asked the Congress to pass legislation extending basic civil rights to the people of Guam and American Samoa so that these people can share our ideals of freedom and self-government. This step, with others which will follow, is evidence to the rest of the world of our confidence in the ability of all men to build free institutions.

The way ahead is not easy. We shall need all the wisdom, imagination and courage we can muster. We must and shall guarantee the civil rights of all our citizens. Never before has the need been so urgent for skillful and vigorous action to bring us closer to our ideal.

We can reach the goal. When past difficulties faced our Nation, we met the challenge with inspiring charters of human rights—the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution, the Bill of Rights and the Emancipation Proclamation. Today our representatives, and those of other liberty-loving countries on the United Nations Commission on Human Rights are preparing an international bill of rights. We can be confident that it will be a great landmark in man's long search for freedom since its members consist of such distinguished citizens of the world as Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

With these noble charters to guide us, and with faith in our hearts, we shall make our land a happier home for our people, a symbol of hope for all men, and a rock of security in a troubled world.

Abraham Lincoln understood so well the ideal which you and I seek today. As this conference closes we would do well to keep in mind his words, when he said:

"If it shall please the Divine Being who determines the destinies of nations, this shall remain a united people, and they will, humbly seeking the Divine guidance, make their prolonged national existence a source of new benefits to themselves and their successors, and to all classes and conditions of mankind."

It'll Be Philip For Elizabeth, English Think

London, June 29 (U.P.).—Princess Elizabeth, heiress presumptive to the British throne, has looked over most of the eligibles from whom she must pick her consort and has decided that she still loves Lieut. Philip Mountbatten, the former Prince Philip of Greece, court circles revealed today.

Elizabeth

Thus, unless she changes her mind between w and Christmas—and her best ends say that is very unlikely—e engagement of the pretty 21-ir-old princess and her blond ndsome third cousin may be an-ounced to the empire as a holiday esent.

The marriage, according to well-nformed court circles, may take lace in next spring or early ummer.

Elizabeth has been loyal to Philip now for almost a year despite King George's suggestion that she see as many young men as possible in order to make sure that it is really love.

So Elizabeth went out with guards, officers and selected noblemen and had many others—the list is over 100 names long—to the palaces for parties and dances.

But court circles say that despite her unusually heavy schedule Elizabeth still manages to see quite a lot of Philip and writes to him when they are apart.

Townsend Delegates Cheer Pepper Promise of Senate Vote

Senator Claude A. Pepper (D., Fla.) was cheered by several thousand Townsend Plan convention delegates yesterday when he declared America could help "sweep poverty from the earth" if the Townsend movement could sweep America.

Speaking at the Uline Arena as Dr. Francis E. Townsend and his followers concluded their four-day sessions, Pepper promised them a vote in the Senate on the pensions-at-60 bill which he has introduced.

"If we keep the Senate all summer and all winter," he said, "I'll get a vote."

His bill, similar to one recently forced out of Committee to the floor of the House, would tax each person, firm and corporation engaged in business for profit 3 per cent of gross income, which would yield an estimated $100 a month in pensions, Pepper said, to persons in these groups:

1. Citizens of 60 years or more who have retired from gainful occupations.

2. Widows with a child or children under 18 years of age.

3. Totally disabled persons.

The Florida Democrat lauded Dr. Townsend for what he termed "attempting to lead the American people out of slavery; poverty and humiliation, as Moses did for his people."

The enthusiastic delegates, numbering more than 5000, contributed more than $26,000 to the Townsend organization yesterday, according to Herbert F. Haren, chairman, filing up to the platform, State by State, to do so.

This would more than cover convention expenses, assording to Haren, who also declared the delegates had spent about $250,000 prsonally in Washington. Total contributions from D. C. supporters, he remarked, came to $3. Maryland, West Virginia and Virginia groups contributed more than $500, it was estimated.

10 Persons Hurt, Damage High in Hopewell Storm

Hopewell, Va., June 29 (U.P.).—Authorities reported "the situation is under control" today after a violent wind and rain storm that injured 10 persons and severely damaged at least 50 homes yesterday.

Police headquarters said the 10 persons hurt in the freak storm had been treated at local hospitals and sent home. No one was killed by the high wind and cloudburst of rain, which struck the town yesterday afternoon.

Some of the oldest residents of the town called the storm "the worst in memory." It lasted nearly and hour and a half.

Red Cross disaster crews set up emergency shelter in Hopewell to care fo rthe homeless. Police Desk Sergt. O. E. Jacobs of Hopewell said the property damage was high. But the omunt has not yet been officially estimated.

Budget Shows First Surplus In 17 Years

By the United Press

President Truman has the first budget surplus in 17 years in the bag for the fiscal year ending today at midnight.

But officials said that an interest payment to be made on the national debt will keep it below the $1,250,000,000 Mr. Truman forecast two months ago—and wreck his chances to beat the record surplus of $1,155,000,000 under President Coolidge exactly 20 years ago.

Government budget experts, in an interview, summarized the situation like this:

On the basis of the latest figures received by the Treasury, the budget surplus—which means the excess of income over spending—was $1,142,925,000 with five days to go.

Final Figures Ready Wednesday

But instead of climbing, the surplus will be driven down on the final day of the fiscal year by an interest payment on the $257,700,000,000 debt that will take more than 500 million dollars.

The impact may drop the final surplus below one billion dollars even though the payment on the debt will be offset in part by further recording of revenue from quarterly income taxes that fell due June 16.

The final figures will not be compiled until Wednesday.

Latest Government reports show that with five days to go, Government receipts for the 12 months were 517 million dollars short of the $42,500,000,000 the President estimated in April, while expenditures were 410 million dollars under his estimate of $41,250,000,000.

Each of these April estimates were more than 10 billion dollars higher than his original estimates in January of last year, when he looked ahead 18 months to predict for this year: revenue, $31,500,000,000; spending, $35,860,000,000; prospective deficit $4,347,000,000.

Taxes Exceed Expectations

What caused the difference was a sharp increase in expenditures over the following months and a then-unforeseen steady expansion of business and employment that has produced a flood of revenue.

Tax receipts far exceeded original expectations which looked to a sharp fall away from wartime levels.

Actually, expanded employment and pay boosts have caused income taxes withheld from pay to spurt 600 million dollars higher than in the preceding fiscal year, and other individual and corporate income tax receipts to make a corresponding showing.

Nevertheless, increased receipts from these and other taxes like the liquor and cigarette levies were more than offset by a drop of over $3,323,000,000 from last year in revenue from the corporation excess-profits tax which has been repealed.

Most of the net decrease in tax collections resulting from the excess-profits tax repeal was made up by a $1,800,000,000 gain over last year in revenue obtained through selling ships and other surplus property. As a result, total revenue has held within almost 300 million dollars of last year's high level.

Man, Hero Son Shot to Death After Wrangle

Phoenixville, Pa., June 29 (AP).—A much-decorated Army Air Forces pilot and his 54-year-old father died early today in what police listed as a double suicide.

Fred K. MacInnis, chief of police, reported that persons present declared the shootings followed an argument on communism and financial problems.

The dead were Michael Souch, an iron worker, and his son, Charles A. Souch, 26, who as a captain in the Air Forces completed 265 fighter plane missions in 5½ years' service in Europe and China.

MacInnis said that Lewis Hegadus of Johnstown, Pa., a cousin of Michael, gave this version of the deaths:

Hegadus, two others and the Souchs were discussing Communism. (MacInnis said it was not clear who was taking what side.) At about 2:15 a. m. (EST), Charles smashed a model plane he had built and declared:

"So this is what I fought for!"

Then he took a 32-caliber German war souvenir gun, walked onto the back porch, followed by his father. A moment later there was a shot.

When Hegadus reached the porch, Charles was dead with a bullet wound through his left temple. The father was holding the gun.

Hegadus tried to grab the gun from him, but Souch fired a shot through his heart. He died on the operating table.

Only World State Can Avert Atom War, Scientists Assert

carefully refrained from attempting to assess the blame for the failure. He declared also that he knew of no dissenting opinion among scientists as to the desirability of the American plan for control—or at least of its basic principles, set forth in last year's Acheson-Lilienthal report. The trouble was not in the plan, he implied, but in failure to find its acceptance.

He added that scientists were also unanimous on the fact that the Russian counterproposals did not "represent anything like an adequate control."

The Russian plan, calling for inspection, but not for an international agency actually operating atomic facilities (as provided by the American plan), had been considered and discarded as impractical by thoughtful American scientists even before the end of the war, Dr. T. R. Hogness, University of Chicago chemist, told the press conference.

Hogness, a trustee of the emergency committee, said "It would require as many inspectors as there are workers" to guarantee against violations.

See Militarism Rampant

The statement pointed out that instead of progress, the past year had found only further steps toward war.

"Militarism is rampant throughout the world. In all history, never in any period of 'peace' have so many men been under arms.

"Even in Great Britain and America with their great anti-militarist traditions, liberal-thinking men, considering the necessities of the situation, turn to the 'realistic' solution. The Prussian disease of which the German and Japanese states have died is beginning to infect the conquerors."

Failure of the U. N. conference is due to no "incidental or transitory" factors, but rather because representatives of the large nations have followed the traditional course of trying to place their own countries in the most advantageous position to win the next war.

"It is useless to proceed further along this path," the statement said. "One cannot prepare for war and expect peace."

To foster hope that the present approach will lead to peace and outlawry of the atomic bomb, "would be a betrayal of our responsibility," the scientists said.

The only alternative is to seek a solution, they concluded, "within the context of a general agreement which guarantees a reasonable degree of security to all nations . . . Such a settlement is not possible if the respective peoples are concerned exclusively with the security and welfare of their own countries."

The scientists called for a restriction of national sovereignty to make possible creation of a supranational government "with powers adequate to the responsibility of maintaining the peace."

To the charge that this might be considered unrealistic, the committee declared that "nothing less is realistic," they concluded:

"We know that the developments of science and technology have determined that the peoples of the world are no longer able to live under competing national sovereignties with war as the ultimate arbitrator.

"Men must understand that the times demand a higher realism which recognizes that 'no man is an island,' that our fate is joined with that of our fellowmen throughout the world. We must contrive to live together in peace even at the cost of great material sacrifice; the alternative is the death of our society."

Urey said the committee was not prepared to specify whether the attempt to create world government should be made through the U. N. or independently. Either way was possible, he believed.

Pressed to give a deadline date, by which time Russia would have the atomic bomb and a sufficient stockpile of them to wage war, Urey guessed at eight years. He agreed with Einstein, however, when the latter interposed that the "time scale is not important. Sooner or later the situation comes about. The only important thing is that we do something about it" before the time runs out.

Sitting in the library of the institution for advanced studies, of which he is the stellar figure, Einstein met reporters in his customary costume—shirt collar open at the neck, and unpressed suit, topped by his long mane of white hair.

He was asked if he stood by a recent estimate that anatomic war would destroy two thirds of the world. That was the vaguest sort of guess, he said. Whether two thirds, more or less, was unimportant. It's enough for us to know that most of the world as we know it would be destroyed.

Other trustees of the emergency committee are Hans A. Bethe, Cornell University; Philip M. Morse, director of the Brookhaven National Laboratory (an operating research agency of the atomic energy commission); Leo Szilard of the University of Chicago; Harrison Brown, also of the University of Chicago; Victor F. Weisskopf, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Linus Pauling of California Institute of Technology.

All but Pauling were present at today's gathering.

Iran May Get Trucks, Radios

By The Associated Press

Brig. Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf is getting ready to return to Iran with an offer of five million dollars' worth of American military equipment. He said yesterday this would go a long way toward giving Russia's oil-rich southern neighbor a modernized, fast-moving constabulary force.

Schwarzkopf, who headed the New Jersey State police at the time of the Lindbergh kidnaping, is chief of an American military mission which has been training the Iranian gendarmerie for five years.

The new equipmen is part of a 25-million-dollar war surplus deal to build up both the Iranian army and the constabularly. The United States has agreed to the sale, but terms must be ratified by the Iranian Parliament.

Light tanks and combat planes are being supplied the Iranian army of about 100,000 but not the gendarmerie. The police share consists mostly of 1½-ton trucks and mobile radios needed to transform the 24,000-man gendarmerie into a force more nearly comparable to American State police outfits.

Schwarzkopf, slight, graying and alert, tackled the job of modernizing the force on American lines in 1942 and now heads a staff of 8 officers and 16 enlisted men. A separate mission of about a score of American officers is helping to modernize the army.

The gendarmerie have to be trained from the ground up. Schwarzkopf said that when he arrived "not a man knew how to drive."

How wise are we, the people?

1 UNTIL RECENTLY, NOBODY REALLY KNEW. In our earliest days many people thought, along with President John Adams, that "the proposition that the people are the best keepers of their own liberties is not true. They can neither judge, act, think nor will as a political body"... words not from a recent dictator, but from a U. S. President!

2 DR. GEORGE H. GALLUP, pioneer public opinion researcher, has charted the public mind for 15 years. To the question, "Have the people been right?" Dr. Gallup answers: "They have been as right as the specialists, and they have been right earlier . . . even in fields where you might expect expert opinion to be far more reliable than the public's intuitions!"

3 TAKE AIR POWER. In 1935, the military "experts" were not at all agreed that airplanes would play an important part in the coming war. Many admirals were saying that planes could never sink ships. But the people wanted the country to develop a strong air arm. Even in this field, the public had seen things more clearly than the specialists.

4 LOOK AT THE SITUATION IN ASIA: As early as 1938 the people of this country were overwhelmingly opposed to our sending scrap iron, oil or gasoline to Japan. Two years later an embargo was placed on these things—but only two years later. It took the Government that long to catch up with the people's sentiments.

5 IN MATTERS OF PUBLIC POLICY, the people, since 1935, have sized up almost every situation years ahead of the so-called "leaders" in Washington. Before anyone in Government officially suggested conscription, polls showed that the people favored the draft, and help for the Allies. They favored Lend-Lease long before it came.

6 BUT ARE THEY WILLING TO ACT? The Gallup polls reveal the people's consistent willingness to make sacrifices for the country's good. During the war, for instance, no pressure group, and few politicians, favored total mobilization. Yet polls showed that the people would have welcomed such a movement to assign each person to a war job.

7 THIS WILLINGNESS TO SACRIFICE for the country's good extends even to the family wallet. Tremblingly, Congress passed laws bringing income taxes to some 40 million first-time taxpayers. Congress was surprised to discover what all the pollsters knew: that very few would complain. People were willing to bear their share of the war's cost.

8 EVEN MEMBERS OF SPECIAL GROUPS are more interested in the country's welfare than in that of their own group. The rank and file of labor divide on labor legislation just about the way the public does. The same thing is true of business men and of farmers. Farmers and city people consistently divide alike on farm legislation.

9 WHY THE LAG BETWEEN PUBLIC AND CONGRESS? In every situation cited above, Congress was influenced by showers of letters opposed to every action the people wanted. These letters were not from average men and women, but from organized pressure groups. The people, deciding wisely and unselfishly in terms of the national welfare, have proved to the John Adamses that they are their own best rulers.

"Can the ideal of a thinking democracy be made to work in practice?" This searching question was asked recently of Dr. George H. Gallup by the Journal's editors, Bruce Gould and Beatrice Blackmar Gould. The ensuing discussion, documented by the statistical records of Dr. Gallup's American Institute of Public Opinion, answered the question with heartening assurance. It constitutes, the Journal believes, an impressive affirmation of the rightness of the principle on which our nation was founded.

And the Journal this month brings the full, enlightening review to the world's largest audience of women...for it is the Journal's policy to give women all the information that can help them to live well, and to shape wisely their citizen-children.

America as a society can be no greater than the homes which mar or make its citizens. Woman's responsibility is to shape its citizen-children. For this she needs all the traditional skills of homemaking, health and child guidance. She needs, too, the greatest possible understanding of the complex society in which she lives—to prepare her children to live well in that society. The Journal is edited by one basic policy—to bring women the best, most accurate guidance in this great role as mothers and home makers—to bring them, also, information to help them live well in an ever-widening world. The response of women to this concept is enabling the Journal to set new records by every known standard of publishing.

D. C. Income Tax

The District tax bill reported out of conference has been returned to the conferees because the House refused to accept a Senate-approved proposal to permit the District to tax the income of persons residing here seven months or more in the year. Under the Senate amendment such residents have the privilege of subtracting in full all local taxes on income or intangible personal property paid elsewhere. Elected Federal officials and presidential appointees would also be exempted from payment of local income taxes.

The chief criticism of this proposal is that it does less than justice to the District in its endeavor to avoid double taxation. Nevertheless, the House has rejected this reasonable proposal and insists upon retention of an amendment to its own bill, voted from the floor of the House, that would exempt from local income taxation all Government workers who declare that they maintain domiciles in the several States, regardless of the length of time they have lived in the District. Enactment of this amendment would add to the glaring inequities of the present income tax law by granting exemptions to a preferred class of District residents claiming domicile elsewhere, while taxing other residents in similar position.

There are indications that the Senate conferees are preparing to abandon the fight for a reasonably equitable income tax law. Senator Cain, for example, who sponsored the rejected compromise amendment incorporated in the conference bill, points out significantly that the House exemptions would not seriously affect the District budget, as the revenue loss would probably amount to only $1,500,000. That is serious enough, but more than revenue is at stake in this instance. The outrageous inequity of the House plan is an all-sufficient reason for rejecting it. As a matter of principle, therefore, it is to be hoped that the Senate will resist House efforts to put this discriminatory measure on the statute books. Senator Cain himself has suggested repeal of the income tax as an alternative to the House proposal or retention of the existing inequitable law. In our opinion, that would be the best way to settle the issue, if the House remains obdurate, even though the elimination of all income taxes would necessitate a search for new sources of revenue such as a general sales tax.

Public Service

Addressing the bicentennial convocation of Princeton University last week, President Truman reverted to a favorite and familiar theme—the importance and the difficulty of recruiting men of high caliber for Government service. "If our national policies are to succeed," he said, "they must be administered by officials with broad experience, mature outlook and sound judgment. There is, however, a critical shortage of such men." Then, after observing that "the Government must take steps to make its career service more attractive to the kind of men and women it needs" and that policy-makers "should be supported by a career group of administrators skilled in the various aspects of management," he declared: "If capable men and women can look forward to holding such posts as a reward for able service, they will be more eager to accept Government employment."

Well, we hope the young men at Princeton have not heard about what happened to Commissioner Ray Wakefield of the FCC. He served a seven-year term with honor and distinction and, as a matter of course, was renominated to succeed himself. But the other day, six weeks after sending Mr. Wakefield's name to the Senate, President Truman withdrew it and nominated instead an obscure Congressman, noted only for his obstructionism, who happened to have potent political support. The young men at Princeton might get the idea that merit doesn't count for much in the Federal service.

We hope the young men at Princeton haven't heard about what happened to Philip B. Perlman, nominated by the President on January 31 to be Solicitor General of the United States. Senator Homer Ferguson, chairman of a Judiciary subcommittee, has treated the nomination as though he considered it a criminal indictment. He has harassed and abused the nominee, ordered him to produce all his income tax returns and personal records as though he were on trial, slighted the distinguished jurists who came to testify in his behalf and by persistent procrastination has contrived to keep vacant one of the most important offices in the Government. The President himself is in no way to blame for this, of course; but the example is not likely to make Federal employment seem especially attractive.

Finally, we hope the young men at Princeton have not heard about the President's loyalty investigation order or the Rees bill designed to trump it. For any of them whom youthful enthusiasm may have led into joining an organization deemed subversive by the Attorney General, or into expressing Utopian ideas in a political science thesis, would be likely to find his aspirations for public service checked at once by an FBI charge of disloyalty to his country. It may be doubted that young men or women of high ability will be zealous to enter a Government service in which independence of outlook is considered tantamount to treason. President Truman ought to be aware that much of the difficulty in recruiting the kind of personnel he wants stems from the atmosphere of political and ideological persecution now prevalent in Washington.

Police Expose

Washingtonians have been living in a fool's paradise. So far as their personal safety and the safety of their possessions are concerned, they have been grossly misled as to dangers that confront them every day in the year. The police have concealed hundreds of crimes. We have been led to believe, through the release of official statistics, that the police have been solving an astonishingly high percentage of the robberies committed in the District. The Post's expose of the department's secret files shows that this record was attained only by keeping out of the official statistics more than 600 "pocketed" reports of robberies over a period of 11 months.

Even more serious is the fact that the Police Department has been crippling itself by withholding information about local crimes from its own men. As fully explained by Robert Bruskin and John Singerhoff in their detailed story in The Post of yesterday, crimes on which reports have been withheld from the police teletype system become known only to a few detectives and the police of one precinct. Many citizens who have been knocked down with a black-jack or held up at the point of a gun and robbed of substantial sums of money in the last 11 months now know that their cases were never reported to the police as a whole. Nor have they been reported to the community to give it an awareness of how serious its crime problem is. Neither the full power of the police themselves nor of an aroused public indignation has been utilized in the fight against crime.

What is the purpose of this dangerous concealment? Inspector Robert J. Barrett, who is scheduled to be sworn in as superintendent of police tomorrow, says that the practice "just grew up over the years." At the same time he admits that "nobody has the power to hold legitimate cases." The fact that hundreds of reports of robbery were held in the precincts in the last 11 months at the behest of the Detective Bureau, which Inspector Barrett heads, may indicate only negligence and careless administration. But this system, or lack of system, could be used to conceal and shield underworld operations. The surest way to prevent the arrest of criminals is to hide the information that a crime has been committed.

It is obvious, too, that such loose reporting practices expose our law-enforcement officers to ready opportunities for corruption. If reports of robberies can be withheld from the police teletype system and from the press, thugs will not be slow in offering bribes to officers who are in a position to bring about such concealment. We do not charge that corruption has followed in the wake of concealment. But the fact that the door to it has been opened is serious enough to warrant a thorough investigation. It is well to remember that The Post's expose has dealt only with robbery cases. Indications are that crime reports have been "pocketed" in various other categories of cases. The whole story can be exposed to the light of day only through a searching inquiry, and we think that task should be undertaken by the House or Senate District Committee, or, preferably, a joint committee representing both.

The Detective Bureau's belated effort to close as many "pocketed" cases as possible after The Post's investigation got under way is an admission of past laxity. The Inspector's statement Sunday, promising a complete check of the Detective Bureau's crime reporting methods at once and a survey of the entire department after he is sworn in as Police Superintendent, constitutes a prompt acknowledgement of the importance of accurate reports and a commendable promise to secure them. We hope that this move to set its own house in order will prove effective and that the department will begin the new fiscal year under orders from within to report every crime of which the police acquire knowledge. But clearly that is not enough. The extent, purpose and effect of this concealment ought to be fully disclosed by an impartial body of public servants. Only in that way can the community hope to secure effective correction of this abuse of discretion and to formulate a sound judgment as to what the needs of the department are.

Consumer Credit

Approval by the House Banking Committee of a bill immediately terminating consumer credit controls is defended by Chairman Wolcott on the ground that regulation has "outlived its usefulness." The Federal Reserve Board which has urged legislation authorizing peacetime regulation of consumer credit, with the active support of the President, is of the contrary opinion. And there is good reason for thinking that many business executives—especially those representing small and medium-size concerns—would also welcome a prolongation of controls. Pressure for their abolishment has been exerted chiefly by financing agencies and large business organizations that hope to profit from an expansion of consumer loans and of sales based on credit, made possible by reducing the amount of down payments on certain types of goods sold on installment and by lengthening the period for repayment.

Since VJ-Day a tremendous expansion has already occurred in consumer credit, and a further expansion is to be expected as more automobiles and durable consumer goods come on the markets. But if that expansion is unduly accelerated while many kinds of goods are still scarce and prices extremely high, through excessive liberalization of installment terms of sales or of other types of consumer credit, the consequences may well be disastrous to buyers and sellers, to lenders and borrowers alike. Even if Congress rejects permanent peacetime regulation of consumer credits as an aid to business stability, it might well consider a one-year extension of consumer credit controls in accordance with the latest recommendation of Chairman Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board.

At present the prices of many durable goods ordinarily bought on credit are unreasonably high, judged with reference to the incomes of consumers and their ability to repay credit advances. A sound expansion of consumer loans under such conditions calls for unusual care to protect the credit-giver from losses and to protect the buyer from loss of his equity in goods purchased on credit. The temporary retention of existing limited controls over installment credit, plus the power held in reserve to impose additional controls over all types of consumer credit, would have a salutary influence in discouraging unsound types of loan expansion during the coming critical months.

This type of credit control is admittedly difficult to administer and the Federal Reserve authorities doubtless look forward with mixed emotions to their impending emancipation from the onerous duties connected with enforcement of Regulation W under which consumer credit controls have been exercised in accordance with an executive order. But we feel sure that it is to the interest of the country that those controls should not be hastily abandoned on the assumption that they have ceased to be useful. On the contrary, this kind of credit control is more effective and even more essential during this transition period than it was during the war when consumers were restrained from overbuying by a general scarcity of goods.

Waiting At The Church

Just what the fifteen members of the Electrical Workers Union in St. Joseph, Mich., had in mind when they picketed the wedding ceremony of Mr. Lloyd Bowers Taft and Miss Virginia Stone is not very clear. Perhaps they were not very clear about it themselves. One of the banners carried by a young woman said merely, "Senator Taft is a Bad, Bad Boy," which has a half-admiring, half-envious sound and resembles the sort of thing that little girls like to scribble on sidewalks when they get tired of writing, "Mary F. loves Johnny B." But another banner, carried by one of the sententious sex, said that "Taft and Hartley Are Infamous Names," which, if we may say so, was scarcely a tactful thing to flaunt within the vision of a young woman who had just taken one of those names for the rest of her life. A third banner attempted the note of magnanimity. "Congratulations," it said, "to you," meaning of course the bridegroom, but "—— to Your Old Man." Altogether the affair appears to have been a rather incongruous mixture of sheepish sentimentality and righteous indignation.

Anyway, none of the demonstrators seems to have possessed anything like the hypnotic power of that old seafaring man who picketed with some success another and even more memorable wedding celebration. But presumably the union leaders at St. Joseph did not anticipate nor perhaps even desire that any of the invited guests should be discouraged from attending the ceremony, to say nothing of the principals. However, this may well have been only the beginning of what may now become a recognized practice.

How effective a picket line might be at a wedding where one of the principals was a conscientious, dues-paying trade unionist, we do not like to imagine. The plight of a bridegroom thus torn between love and loyalty to the cause of labor would certainly afford a difficult but fascinating theme for the romantic novelist. Indeed, it has possibilities for comedy as well. Earlier in this century you may remember, a famous music hall artist named Vesta Victoria used to delight her audience with a song called And There Was I, A-Wytin' at the Church. Perhaps the song should be revised to read:

> Sent a little note;
> This is wot 'e wrote,
> "Cawn't get insoide
> For to myke yer me broide—
> Yer picketed!"

But of course from picketing weddings, it would be only a step to picketing funerals. And thus the lords of labor may one day have in their hands a power analogous to that fearful instrument of interdict wherewith, centuries ago, the lords spiritual humbled and brought to terms so many proud princes temporal.

BUT NEVER ALONE

The soft, cool hands of the snow,
Its gentle, relentless breath,
Would lead you on, that you should go
Straight through the doors of death.

Such beauty is an unearthly thing,
It is danger to trust it far;
See the unfurled bright wing,—
See the splintered white star!

Look with remote wonder upon
The cold, immaculate scene,
But never, O never alone,—
Keep the warm world between

You and the shining snow.
Even in play take care;
Remember, the bravest wild things know,
And regard it with fear.

Scrap Iron Exports

The letter "Depleted Resources" from John A. Balch in your issue of June 25 raised the doubt whether scrap iron, along with petroleum products, is being exported to Russia. Since 1941, small lots of scrap have moved to Canada, Mexico, and a few other friendly countries, under the control of the Government, but otherwise there have been no exports.

In fact, the steel, foundry and scrap industries have organized a Joint Committee for Expediting scrap which, among other things, is prodding the Government to return all Army and Navy overseas scrap and surplus material which is potential scrap.

Crime In Mount Rainier

I note in the news columns of The Post for June 25, a communication from Mayor Floyd Mathias of Mount Rainier to Mr. D'Allesandro of Baltimore, in which Mr. Mathias takes the Mayor to task for the incidence of crime in Baltimore. Mr. Mathias speaks smugly of the "crime-free" blessedness of his community of 12,000, all due to the vigilance of the Mount Rainier Police Department, and the cooperation of the local citizenry.

By publishing this letter from Mr. Mathias to Mr. D'Allesandro, The Post qualifies itself for an award for the most humorous story of the year. In fact, the folks here in Mount Rainier are still laughing, albeit somewhat bitterly.

True, we have been free from crimes of violence, such as murder, arson and rape. No small credit may be given to the proximity of the Prince Georges County police substation at Hyattsville for this condition.

Operating under the noses of our police department are probably more gambling facilities per hundred citizens than the most vigilant observer could ferret out in Baltimore or Washington. We if Mount Rainier seem to cater to that type of "tourist trade," judging from the District licenses on cars parked outside of a well known dining and drinking establishment located scarcely two blocks from police headquarters. This establishment boasts of a thoroughly up - to - date "horse parlor," where one may while away the afternoon following the ponies. Other gambling facilities are provided in a barber shop, a drug store, a smaller restaurant, an apartment located within a stone's throw of the "police" headquarters. (I have been reliably informed that over 20 telephone lines serve this apartment).

If the State of "law enforcement" in Mount Rainier is not known to the Mayor, he is woefully blind as a law-enforcing official.

Austrian Relief

Many Washingtonians have listened with much pleasure to the famous Trapp Family Choir singing the folk songs of their native Austria. This same native land, but recently liberated from the Nazi yoke, is in great misery indeed, for starvation and destitution are the common lot of the people. The following quotation is taken from the von Trapps' appeal to their American friends in behalf of the hapless folk of Austria:

"The country which gave to the world a Haydn, Mozart, Schubert, Johann Strauss—a 'Silent Night'—may perish if we don't all help together and act right now . . . All over Austria the population suffers from lack of practically everything . . . Moreover, thousands of people arrive daily in freight cars at different stations; displaced people from the north, refugees from the south . . . So we founded the Trapp Family Austrian Relief, Inc. The papers were signed by the secretary of the State of Vermont and we are entitled to raise funds and collect goods all over the country . . . We have no overhead expenses; we do everything within our family. . . .

Let us suggest four ways to help Austria: (1) Send to the Trapp Family Austrian Relief, Inc., Stowe, Vt., by parcel post or Railway Express (reverse the charges if you wish) any clothing or nonperishable foodstuffs you can spare . . . (2) Contribute by donating funds. Make checks payable to the Trapp Family Austrian Relief, Inc., Stowe, Vt. . . . (3) Write to us and ask for addresses of needy families or individuals if you prefer to take care of someone yourself . . . (4) Give us more addresses of people to whom we could send this appeal. If a people of only about seven millions has a death rate of about a thousand a week from starvation, there is no time to lose.

What America Needs

There is life in an old phrase yet. Five times or more, within the last month, the words "what America needs is a good 5-cent cigar" have been read or heard.

It's almost like a new American game. Every time someone comes up with a new American need, the 5-cent cigar gets a place in the picture.

Now I ask you and your readers, how about an all-American effort to modernize this old "5-cent cigar?" How about collecting the best of the modern "what America needs?" How about publishing the following samples as a starter and adding to the collection from current speeches and other letter writers? "What America need is:

Politically—a good dark horse. Economically—a national priority list. Socially—an old-fashioned rummy game. Civicly—more cities with more taxicabs and less traffic crabs. Faithfully—a little more faith in the faith of our fathers.

Monetary Scandal

Can it be that the national furore over the tax and labor bills explains why so little is said or written about what seems to me the greater financial scandal in our history? The most primitive understanding must grasp the horrendous consequences of granting Russia the privilege of unrestrained use of our currency plates. Besides this criminal blunder all other monetary disasters fade into insignificance.

National Park Timber Grab

During the long Administration of the late President Roosevelt and Secretary of the Interior Ickes, both of whom were sincere conservationists, the public came to implicitly trust the Interior Department and its bureau, the National Park Service, to protect the national parks and their magnificent primeval forests of immense trees. But now that department is in different hands and the confidence of the public is being completely and ruthlessly betrayed.

The Interior Department and National Park Service officials have been holding secret conferences with representatives of the lumber interests of Washington State and have abjectly surrendered to their demands; they are sponsoring and promoting bills in Congress to trim out 56,393 acres (over 88 square miles) from the forests of the Olympic National Park, one of our most magnificent parks and the finest of all as far as forests are concerned, in order to open them up for lumbering.

This particular part of the park which is to be excluded contains most of the wonderful "rain forest" of immense trees, such as sitka spruces, western cedars, western hemlocks, lowland white firs, and most important of all of the last remaining examples of big douglas fir, some of them 300 feet or more tall. The forest is one of nature's most beautiful and impressive scenic manifestations, and is the finest stand of timber in the whole national park system. It is to be given up to be logged off, not that the timber is needed, but because the votes of the lumber communities of that region, who want to cut the timber, are desired for the 1948 election.

There is plenty of timber in smaller trees outside this national park for housing needs for years to come.

Have the citizens of the United States, real owners of the park, been consulted? Of course not. Is the Nation going to get anything whatever in recompense for the great loss? Of course not. The grab was arranged in secret, and the ways are already well greased to slip the necessary legislation through Congress before the public wakes up and can organize an effective opposition.

In putting through this most outrageous piece of robbery of the public, the private interests and the officials who are betraying their trust by cooperating with them, are taking far more than the money value of the land and timber. They are taking something that can practically never be replaced, for many of these splendid trees are 600 to 800 years or more old, and will take six or eight centuries to replace; not a day less.

The Interior Department pretends that it cannot resist the demands of three or four counties in Washington State, and gives several other excuses too trivial to discuss except one, which is that there are holdings of private lands in the area which cause "administrative difficulties" for the officials. Why not acquire these private lands, only a few hundred acres in extent, by exchanging them for a little of the large area of Government-owned timber in the vicinity? President Roosevelt was arranging to do this, had the exigencies of the war and his unexpected death prevented it. Why is it not done now?

The present attack on the Olympic Park can still be blocked if the public will make its indignation felt by letters of protest to members of Congress (best to Congressman Richard J. Welsh or Senator Hugh Butler, who are the chairmen of the committees on public lands) or to Secretary of the Interior J. A. Krug, or President Truman himself. Immediately dangerous bills in Congress attacking the Olympic National Park are those originated by and being promoted by the Interior Department: H. R. 2750 and S. 1240.

The park was established by Congress to be permanently preserved for the enjoyment, recreation, uplift and inspiration of the American public of today and of the future, not to furnish stumpage for the mill owners of the vicinity or to be an expendable resource for any political party whatever.

A Light on Lincoln

LINCOLN THE LIBERAL STATESMAN, by J. G. Randall. (Dodd, Mead, $4.50.)

The eight essays which comprise this book are generalizations drawn from Professor Randall's studies for his ambitious biographical work, Lincoln the President, now in two volumes, the third, as I understand, having been delayed for the release of the Lincoln papers in the Library of Congress. The professor's great merits as a biographer are the critical spirit in which he approaches the evidence and his determination to separate historical reality from the welter of hypothesis, conjecture spurious reminiscence and hagiological legend; his chief weakness is a prose idiom rather unsuited to his method and purpose. The professor, I fear, has had a lamentable tendency to echo those rhetorical placebos and hieratic ambiguities invented by harassed journalists who have no time to determine what they are trying to say. Mr. Randall of course knows very well what he wants to say, but there are moments when he prefers to forget it and to tell us instead that "human interdependence cannot be violated with impunity," or about "solid significance" or "authentic reality," or to remind us that "no problem of modern civilization is more urgent than reorientation of outlook and policy in the matter of warmaking."

What Professor Randall wants to tell us primarily is that in President Lincoln the passion of the idealist was conjoined to the perception of the practical politician and that this affords the key to his conduct in office. To reach this view of Lincoln, he thinks, it is necessary to clear away a good many clouds of myth, and especially the romantic legend of the backwoods hero who suddenly emerged from poverty and obscurity to lead his people through their greatest crisis, guided by a mystic vision and tormented by a secret sorrow. As Professor Randall observes, Springfield in the 1850s was scarcely the backwoods, and long before the great debate with Douglas, Lincoln was a famous and prosperous corporation lawyer, allied by marriage with a prominent and wealthy family. The professor is also at great pains to discount the Ann Rutledge legend, for which, as he says, there is no evidence that the historian can conscientiously swallow; and dismissing the testimony of Herndon as the mere "pen-swinging of an amateur psychologist," he concludes from the remaining evidence that the marriage of the Lincolns was as happy and harmonious as most, despite temperamental imperfections on either side.

Lincoln's political views, even on the slavery question, were, as he shows, far closer to those of Senator Douglas than to those of the Radical Republicans; but unhappily it was the Radical faction which dominated the Congress and had, therefore, to be appeased. The emancipation proclamation did not represent Lincoln's solution of the slavery problem; and in any case, like the emancipation law previously passed by Congress, was merely a gesture prompted by the diplomatic and political exigencies. In this as in most other matters, Lincoln was a moderate, in the sense of one who, although ardently desiring reforms, wishes to achieve them gradually and if possible by equitable and peaceable adjustment. But he was also the practical statesman who understands what is possible in a given situation and what is not. This apparently explains the dismissal of General McClellan after his victory at Antietam, although he was, as Professor Randall observes, the only general who was never defeated in an important battle and of whom "there is reason to believe that he would have succeeded as well as Grant did and far sooner." Again, Lincoln, though a devout constitutionalist, assumed extraconstitutional powers, and justified them on ground of public necessity; yet the powers were exercised with discretion and moderation; "the Constitution," as Professor Randall puts it, "was stretched but not subverted"; and he cites with approval Lincoln's argument that the nation which accepts an arbitrary rule in time of crisis, need not develop a taste for it any more than a man need develop a fondness for emetics because he has been given one in a time of illness. But, then, as Professor Corwin of Yale has suggested, the analogy might have been closer if, instead of "emetics," Mr. Lincoln had said "alcohol."

One of Professor Randall's essays is devoted to the fateful expedition for the reprovisioning of Fort Sumter. There is not much doubt that the decision to send the expedition was based upon political rather than purely military considerations, since the fort was in any case untenable if attacked. The question, then, is whether the decision was taken to appease the Northern extremists or to resolve the qualms of the Northern moderates by provoking an open act of war. Of Lincoln's Cabinet all but Blair had originally opposed the expedition, and Seward, as is well known, went to extraordinary efforts to circumvent it; he had even given to the South Carolinians a promise that the fort would be evacuated. But it is Professor Randall's belief that Lincoln knew nothing of the promise. Here again, the professor thinks, the President was playing the game of moderation, since he had given orders that Sumter was not to be reinforced, unless attacked. He inclines to the view that in the situation then existing the explosion must have come at one point or another; that nothing that Lincoln might have done or neglected to do would have satisfied the agitators on each side, who by asserting so often and so loudly that war was coming had actually made it come.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

While Congress Fiddled

SOMETHING HAS BEEN quietly in progress in Chicago and Detroit which may in the end have a more profound effect on the future of the American labor movement, and indeed on American politics as a whole, than the controversial new labor act. One of the slickest maneuvers in labor history has been going on in the C. I. O.'s United Automobile Workers, the biggest CIO union. This maneuver is designed to oust Walter Reuther, anti-Communist U. A. W. president, from the union's leadership and replace him with George Addes, dark-faced ambitious secretary-treasurer, who has consistently worked with the Communists.

If the trick succeeds, the results are entirely foreseeable. Unions representing something close to a majority of the total membership of the CIO will then have fallen under tight Communist control or deep Communist influence. The situation will be quite beyond remedy by Philip Murray, the CIO's sincere but vacillating president. And for the first time in American history a really important segment of the American Labor movement will be at the beck and call of the Communist Party. In the light of this possibility, the commotion about the labor law looks pretty much like fiddling while Rome burns.

THE HISTORY of the maneuver is interesting. For a long time there have been jurisdictional UAW troubles between UAW and another CIO union, the small farm equipment workers. The farm equipment workers are tightly held by the Communists. The political position of Grant Oakes, farm equipment president, may be deduced from the fact that he has indorsed a subscription drive of "the New York Daily Worker," a journal to which he frequently grants exclusive interviews. Nevertheless the CIO leadership, Reuther included, has repeatedly attempted to arrange a merger between the UAW and the FEW, to do away with the jurisdictional complications. The FEW has always pulled away from simple amalgamation, on instructions from the party, claiming that the union needed a "better deal."

When the FEW turned down a specific merger proposal made by the CIO's jurisdictional committee, which the UAW had accepted, a committee of the UAW was established to negotiate with a similar committee from the FEW to find acceptable terms. The UAW committee was headed by Joseph Mattson, and the other members were Arnold Attwood and George Burt. All three are Addes men, Mattson never reported any specific progress to the UAW board. In March, Reuther offered to help along negotiations. A number of meetings between the two committees were called, to take place in Reuther's office. All were canceled at the last moment by the FEW.

The regular board meeting of the UAW took place in Chicago, from June 9 to June 13. On June 10 the FEW issued a statement that a proposal for a merger had been submitted to Philip Murray. Questioned on this, George Addes claimed that he knew nothing about it, and so did his men on the board. Walter Reuther announced during the meeting that he would have to leave on the last day, Friday the 13th for Washington at 11:15 that morning. Murray never received the proposal.

AT 10 O'CLOCK on Friday the Addes wing of the board suddenly produced a merger agreement. It transpired that this agreement had been worked out in final form in the same hotel in which Reuther was staying. But Reuther, as president of the UAW had never been told that the work was going forward. Reuther was given 15 minutes in which to read the agreement through. He immediately objected to its terms, and asked for a special meeting on the matter for the week of June 23. The Addes-controlled executive board ordered, over Reuther's objections, a referendum on the merger to be completed by July 15.

Reuther's objections were not to the merger, which he himself had attempted to promote, but to its terms. The agreement was full of "gimmicks," too complex to describe in this space, but largely designed to give the political influence of the FEW a disproportionate weight in the UAW. The real meaning of the proposed merger may best be grasped in terms of last year's victory for Reuther, which was by a slim 124-vote margin. The FEW claims a total membership of over 75,000. Its actual membership is probably less than 40,000. But even this membership would give the union 400 votes at the UAW convention next fall. It is easy to see why a union politician, quoted in Detroit's labor paper, The Wage Earner, remarked that there is "enough dynamite in the issue to blow Reuther out of and Addes into the UAW presidency."

But the dynamite is not confined to the auto workers' presidency. It would mean that the process by which Communists all over Europe have gained the whip hand over governments, by the economic power of their control over union labor, would be immeasurably advanced here. The process might be so far advanced that the vast non-Communist majority of the CIO would probably be powerless to stop it. It is further noteworthy that no one who has studied the matter believes that the Taft-Hartley Act could possibly stop it. It is a process which has elsewhere led again and again to the terrible final split between extreme left and extreme right which is the disaster of Europe. It is not too much to say that the future of the United Automobile Workers in the next few months will closely affect the future of the United States.

Toward Efficiency

By Ernest Lindley

The Brown-Lodge Bill

THE BROWN-LODGE bill which both the House and the Senate passed last week without a dissenting vote can be made one of the most constructive achievements of this session of Congress. This is the bill which creates a special commission to survey the entire executive branch of the Government and all Federal independent commissions and quasi-judicial bodies. The objective is to find ways not only to reduce costs but to improve efficiency. The commission can recommend the consolidation or elimination of various services, how and where to draw the lines between executive and quasi-judicial functions. Indeed, its authority is broad enough to permit it to make every kind of recommendation for improving the efficiency of the executive branch of the Federal Government.

Lindley

Such studies have been made before, of course. Nine years ago one was made by a committee of leading experts on public administration appointed by President Roosevelt. Out of this came the Reorganization Act of 1939 and many specific improvements. Piecemeal studies have been made by other special groups and almost continually by the congressional committees on Appropriations, Executive Expenditures, Civil Service, as well as by the Budget Bureau.

Some of the reforms proposed by the President's committee nine years ago have never been effected. Moreover, with the passage of time, a fresh over-all survey is desirable.

WHEN Representative Clarence J. Brown (R., Ohio) introduced this bill, there was some suspicion on the Democratic side that it had a partisan objective. But Mr. Brown and Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, who became the sponsor of the bill in the Senate, could easily demonstrate that the plan had no partisan purpose.

The special commission will have 12 members. Four are to be appointed by the President pro tempore of the Senate, two from the Senate and two from private life. Four are to be appointed by the Speaker of the House, two from the House itself and two from private life. Four are to be appointed by the President, of which two must be from private life. In each class of two persons, not more than one can be from each of the major political parties.

Thus, neither major party can have more than 6 of the 12 members. And since private citizens without party affiliations may be appointed, either or both major parties might have less than half the total membership.

Half the membership would be from outside the Government, half from the public service, with both the legislative and executive branches represented.

This commission would begin work at once but it would not submit its report until January, 1949, after the next national election.

IT WOULD BE HARD to devise a plan better protected against partisan manipulation or better designed to obtain the best combined judgment of experienced public administrators, legislators and business executives and other qualified people from private life.

Assuming that the President approves the bill, everything will depend on the ability and prestige of the men named to the commission. Prestige, as well as ability, is needed if the recommendations agreed upon are to override the vested interests—some bureaucratic, some political, some in the business world—which have blocked important reforms in the past.

The task is one which should challenge some of the best talent of business and the bar. Among business executives, such men as Chester I. Barnard, president of the New Jersey Bell Telephone Co.; Charles E. Wilson, president of the General Electric Co.; Ferdinand Eberstadt and John Hancock come to mind. If men of top rank can be persuaded to serve on the commission itself, other good men can be more easily persuaded to serve on the special subcommittees that will be needed.

This opportunity for improving the efficiency of Government should not be muffed. It is to be hoped that the appointing officers—the President, Speaker Martin and Senator Vandenberg—will seek out and draft men of the highest caliber and standing and that Congress will give them the money they need to make a thorough survey.

Obstructing Recovery

By Mark Sullivan

Russia's Reasons For It

OUR PEOPLE, following by press and radio the Paris Conference of European Foreign Ministers, hear over the airways equivalents of familiar headlines: "Molotov objects," or "Molotov obstructs," or "Russia vetoes."

Sullivan

We know the purpose of the conference, to lay out a program of cooperation by European countries for economic recovery. We know that our Government has made a promise—after Europe has taken steps in cooperation for self-help, America will contribute needed funds and goods.

We grasp the ultimate purpose, the recovery of the world. And we wonder: Will this conference at Paris succeed in agreeing upon cooperation? Or will it come to the same end as a score of other postwar conferences, disagreement and futility?

It can be said at once that this conference, and, the whole of the "Marshall plan" in which this is a step, is more likely to bear fruit than past attempts at agreement. The reason lies in one sentence in the speech, now recognized as a postwar milestone, in which Secretary Marshall laid out the plan. The pregnant sentence is: "The program should be a joint one, agreed to by a number, if not all, the European nations."

WITHIN THAT SENTENCE, the significant words are, "if not all." Superficially, those words, and the sentence as a whole, may seem cryptic. But that is because Secretary Marshall, like other responsible heads of Government, is constrained to practice diplomatic gentleness. Well-informed persons who are not in responsible positions, and are therefore permitted to be frank, infer that Secretary Marshall was talking about Russia, and to Russia. "If not all" means "if not Russia." Some of propriety deters the Secretary of State from saying, or even seeming to assent to, what many in Washington feel; what, for example, Senator Fulbright of Arkansas said the other day—that he was "suspicious" of Russia's motive as respects this conference, that he thinks Russia has "the desire to embarrass the United States." If the American attitude about the Marshall plan and Russia's relation to it were put in words that reflect our public opinion and almost certainly our official intention, the words would be something like this: "We hope that Russia will cooperate in the plan, we shall hold the door open for her to do so, but we doubt that she will; and in any event, with Russia or without Russia, the plan will go forward."

As respects ourselves, the plan will go forward because we have arrived at a settled determination. We have decided to cease putting our aid to Europe in the form of piecemeal charity. We shall continue the aid because we must, we cannot see European peoples starve. But we have determined to give the aid, not as dole, but in a way that will contribute to self-help and recovery. To this end we have told the European nations that they should take the initiative, in the form of cooperative self-help, which presumably will include reduction of trade barriers between European nations. It is this initiative and cooperation that is now being attempted at Paris.

AS RESPECTS Britain and France—which with Russia compose the conference at Paris—likelihood of the Marshall plan going forward is assured by the enthusiasm they have for it, especially Britain. Foreign Minister Bevin has spoken of the Marshall plan in terms of almost ecstatic approval.

It is a question whether the Marshall plan would be best furthered with Russia in it or Russia out of it. Russian cooperation would help greatly, if it were whole-hearted and single-minded. But in a score of attempts at post-war cooperation, the Russian representatives have practiced obstruction and delay. The opportunity for such tactics in attempted cooperation for economic recovery under the Marshall plan, would be as numerous as Russian ingenuity in making use of them. The conviction has come to many, and some have expressed it bluntly, that Russia has a motive for not wishing the recovery of Europe, that continuance of economic paralysis in Europe serves Russia's interests.

Not only as respects the Marshall plan but in the whole field of efforts toward recovery and peace, America has come to feel what former President Hoover put in terse words. Stressing the terrible need for peace and recovery, and summarizing obstructions practiced by Russia, Mr. Hoover said: "We should wait no longer."

CAA Rules Infractions Cost 8 Air Lines $19,100 in Year

By James J. Strebig
Associated Press Staff Writer

Eight air lines paid $19,100 for infractions of the civil air regulations during the last 12 months, the Civil Aeronautics Administration said yesterday in response to an inquiry.

The record shows 11 separate sums ranging from $100 to $9,500 for violations. The list of cases varies from operating a scheduled flight from an unapproved airport to failure to maintain fire-fighting equipment properly.

All of these cases were settled by compromises in which the air lines paid without a legal admission of guilt.

Under CAA policy, cases are not announced as they occur but are kept in a public record. The policy was disclosed last week when a search of congressional hearing records showed United Airlines had paid $5,000 in a "compromise settlement" for making a short cut off the airways on the Kemmerer-Rock Springs, Wyo., route.

Block in Aileron

In two cases, air lines paid for flying with a block inserted in the left aileron, the control at the outer part of the wing used to maintain lateral stability and to coordinate turns.

Here is a brief summary of the compromise settlements as described in CAA files dating back to July 1, 1946:

Pan American Grace Airways, Inc.—$9500 as a consolidated penalty for failure to maintain fire-fighting equipment; dispatching a plane when the pilots did not have maps for a portion of the trip; lack of proper instrument lights, and failure to maintain adequate maintenance records. An additional $700 was imposed for permitting the operation of seven planes in excess of the allowable time between periodic checks.

Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc.—$500 for installing propeller blades that were nicked and scratched; $100 for flying a plane without waiting for inspection and approval of engine modifications; $100 for flying a plane between Kansas City and Chicago with blocks attached that "restricted the movement of the left wing aileron during the flight."

Check Flight Not Made

National Airlines, Inc.—$1800 for permitting first pilots on several occasions to operate planes without requiring them to pass an instrument check flight within 45 days before the expiration of a six-month period for such checks, and also for failing to report within seven days an unauthorized flight from New York to Spartanburg, S. C.

Northwest Airlines, Inc.—$800 for operating two trips into Newark, N. J., airport when weather conditions were below the specified minimums.

All American Airlines, Inc. (an airmail pickup service)—$400 for operating several flights when the plane had not been given the routine inspection within the preceding 15 hours.

American Overseas Airlines, Inc.—$100 for operating a scheduled flight from an unapproved airport (Charlottetown, P. E. I., Canada) after the pilot had used emergency authority to land.

Wiley Urges Decentralization

By the United Press

Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.) urged yesterday that at least part of the Federal Government be moved from Washington to the "grassroots" to protect it in the event of an atomic war.

Wiley, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said he would introduce today a resolution to require the Senate Agriculture Committee to make a six-months study of the ways and means by which the Department of Agriculture could be decentralized.

He said in a radio interview that progressive decentralization is necessary in the interest of national security and also for the purpose of efficiency.

He recommended the Agriculture Department's dairy division be moved to the dairy section of the country, the cotton division to the cotton area and other sections to the areas where their particular commodity is produced.

Wiley said that if an atomic bomb fell on Washington, it could destroy the nerve center of our economy—the War Department, the Navy Department and all of the civilian units.

Russian Living Costs Up 166% In 9 Months, Labor Dept. Says

By the United Press

The Labor Department said last night that the cost of living in Russia has increased sharply since last September, when the Soviet Union took its first step towards abolition of rationing.

In an unusual and admittedly sketchy report on Russia's post-war economy, the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics estimated that prices of rationed foods have jumped "upwards of 166 per cent" in the last nine months.

During the same period, BLS said, Russia has announced average wage increases of only 25 per cent.

"From the available data, it appears that the purchasing power of most wage earners has been lowered," BLS said. "The cost of rations has increased much more sharply than wages."

A bureau spokesman said Russia's high-price troubles stem from a USSR Council of Minister's decree last September 16 designed to pave the way for a return to the "single price system," or a status where everyone can buy the same items for the same price.

Since the start of the war, he said, Russia has operated on a "multiple price system." It worked something like this:

Three Separate Markets

To protect the low-income workers and still allow the higher-bracket people to spend their rubles, three different type markets were established.

For the low-income workers most living essentials were rationed but prices were maintained at a relatively low level. These rationed items could be purchased only at government-operated stores with ration coupons.

For the higher-income people identical items might be purchased ration free but at a much higher price. Stores selling these commodities also were government operated.

The third type was the free market, which sold to everyone ration free at prices based on supply and demand. These markets dealt almost exclusively in food and their supplies were limited since farmers and producers were required to meet established quotas to government stores before taking theirs to the free markets.

Wages Also Raised

As a first step towards bringing all prices closer to the same level, the Council of Ministers increased prices on rationed goods and lowered prices on the identical, but nonrationed, items. At the same time, the council raised wages for the low-bracket workers.

BLS said the new Soviet price policy was designed to "liquidate large wartime savings before rationing is terminated," "reduce food consumption in the face of short supplies," and reclassify downward "the ration status for many white-collar workers and a larger reduction in ration allowances for "nonproductive citizens.'

"Since the decree, this process has been accelerated by increasing ration prices which had been maintained at close prewar levels throughout the war and postwar periods," BLS said. "There remain, however, substantial price differences between ration and nonration prices for many commodities."

Leon J. Taishoff, operator of a cleaning shop at 619 Pennsylvania ave. se., reported he was heldup at gunpoint by two men about 6:45 a. m. February 11, 1947. The bandits got $350 and his watch, Taishoff stated.

The Taishoff case was reported on the volume book at the Fifth Precinct station and marked "Hold J. Powell."

There was no evidence on the volume book that the report was sent to the Central Bureau at Police Headquarters over the teletype network as required by police regulations. There was no report in the police statistical bureau.

The newspapers carried a short story about the robbery.

Taishoff was out of the city and could not be reached by The Post for comment. Vivian Goode who works at the cleaning shop said Taishoff never got his money back and doesn't think the bandit was arrested.

Theft by Armed Sailor Marked 'Confidential'

Francis Sullivan, 28, of the Fairlawn Apts., 1500 block 19th st. se., told police he was robbed by an armed sailor in front of 917 18th st. nw. on July 25 last year. He had $112 and a watch taken from him.

Contacted by The Post, Sullivan said he hasn't heard anything from the police since the incident was reported. His report at the Third Precinct Station was marked "Hold—confidential report by the robbery squad says Detective Sergeant Helwig."

A subsequent progress report filed at Police Headquarters stated "This appears to be a false report."

However, the Detective Bureau listed Sullivan's address at the time of the robbery as 1408 19th st. nw. The correct address which was carried in the precinct book was in southeast.

Sullivan's case like the others, is not a matter of record in the Statistical Bureau.

Arlington Man's Report Found Filed on 'C' Card

Leo J. Johnston, formerly of 255 Seminary rd., Arlington, Va., a houseman for Eric Sevareid, CBS news commentator, reported he was attacked and robbed of $10 and a wrist watch at 1:45 a. m., January 31, 1947. He said he was accosted at 7th and N sts nw., by a lone footpad.

Johnston's report was located by The Post on a "C" card in the robbery squad files. With it was another "C" card stating that a letter had been received from Sevareid.

A reporter telephoned Secareid who said Johnston had left the city. The news broadcaster gave the following report of the robbery:

Johnston telephoned him the night of the robbery with a dime which the police had given him to get home with. The police, Sevareid said, had appeared skeptical of Johnston's story and thought he was drunk.

Sevareid said he drove into town after Johnston and found that he was not intoxicated. Sevareid stated that he wrote a letter to the Police Department asking that an effort be made to solve the case. A detective came and talked with him about the robbery after reeciving the letter, Sevareid said, and that's the last he's heard from police about the matter.

The Post found no record of a report at the Second Precinct.

Woman, 60, Fleeced By 'Pocketbook Trick'

A 60-year-old woman was fleeced of $530 by the "pocketbook trick." The victim who lives on California st. nw., was approached, she told police, in a 7th st. department store on April 22, 1947, by another woman. The latter pointed out to her a third woman who had apparently just found a pocketbook with a considerable sum of money in it.

The third woman told the victim she would divide the money in the found purse with her if she did not tell the police. The victim agreed and was told she would have to put up some money "to show her good faith." It was then the victim turned over to the pair $530 in exchange for the found purse which appeared to be bulging with money.

The trio parted after agreeing on a later meeting time and place when the found treasure would be divided. When the victim got home and examined the "money" in the pocketbook, she found it contained only $1 wrapped around a wad of newspaper.

Naturally, when she showed up at the appointed meeting place, the woman who got her money failed to arrive.

The Police Department put this case in the concealed "M" file. No report was found on the volume book at the Second Precinct. It is not recorded in police statistics.

The victim told a Post reporter she has heard nothing from the police since she reported the crime. If any suspects have been seized, she has never been told, she said. None of the money was ever returned to her.

Out-of-Towners Find Complaints Marked 'Hold'

Out-of-towners frequently find their complaints chanelled into the category of "C" and "M" cases.

An example of this is the report of Anton Lorenz of Buffalo, N. Y. He was threatened by a street corner thug with a gun at 16th and I sts. nw. about 8 p. m. January 27, 1947. The bandit escaped with $600.

Lorenz's report to the Third Precinct was held at the precinct and not sent to the Central Bureau at the direction of two detective sergeants. The volume book was marked "Hold says Cooper and Young of the Robbery Squad."

Lorenz left town shortly thereafter. The Post contacted him in Buffalo and learned he had received through the mail his pocketbook, papers and two railroad tickets which were in his wallet. None of the money was returned, he said.

He stated that he had written to the police here about the case, but had not received a reply.

His case has not been recorded in the official statistics of local crimes.

Lieut. Robert V. Murray, chief of the Robbery Squad turned over to the Post, Saturday night, the progress reports of the detectives who sought to solve the Lorenz case.

The latest report of progress given to Lieutenant Murray by Detective Young was dated February 1, 1947. It said Lorenz was shown through the photographs in the Rogue's Gallery the night of the robbery and was unable to identify anyone.

Young reported that Lorenz had said he would return to Washington to prosecute his assailant when and if the man was caught.

The "progress report" stated further "Will continue to work on this case and question anyone arrested in this type of robbery." It was signed Herbert C. Young.

Young's report revealed no teletype number, indicating the report was not transmitted to Police Headquarters for the official statistics.

Had it been reported as the regulations require, a lookout would have been flashed for the gunman to all precinct stations, thus going to 1700 policemen instead of a handful at the robby squad and the Third Precinct.

Not all "pocket" reports escaped police action. Some were solved and some managed to reach official statistics. But Post reporters found little method even in the system of withholding reports.

Robbery at Tavern Cited as Example

An example of the apparent hit-and-miss type of recording robbery complaints is the case of Sam E. Colie of 620 Onelda pl. nw.

Colie reported that during the night of March 27-28, after visiting several taverns, he missed his wallet containing $3500.

His complaint was registered at the Detective Bureau and made an "M" case. The police subsequently arrested three women and took them before the grand jury—all that police practice here requires to close a case.

Yet this "closed" case has not reached the precinct volume book nor the statistical bureau as a closed case.

Crime Statistics Omit Assault and Robbery

Another example of the lackadaisical methods employed to maintain records is the robbery of Fred Shaver of 1115 M st. nw.

Two men assaulted him in the 1200 block N st. nw., at 1:45 a. m. December 17, and took $750. His report was not entered at the Second Precinct, but was relegated to a "C" card at the robbery squad.

Detectives, however, continued active on the investigation and "within 30 days," according to Shaver, had arrested two men who received jail sentences of "about two years."

This case is marked "closed" on Detective Bureau records, but does not appear in official crime statistics neither as a case of robbery nor as a solved one.

Secrecy on Holdup Considered Justified

Some cases probably were located in the "pocket" group properly.

One sensational daylight holdup by two masked men, which did not come to light until the perpetrators had been indicted, was "held" from the teletype network and official crime reports apparently for good reaosn.

Orlando C. Thornton, 53, of 1413 17th st. nw., teacher and treasurer of Cardozo High School, was robbed of $125 by armed bandits as he sat in his office on the second floor of the school building, February 27, 1947.

The school official told police the men entered his office wearing bandannas over their faces. They forced him to go to a safe, hand them the money and then, with a gun at his back, forced him to walk to the 8th st. entrance to the school on the first floor. Then they fled.

Thornton told The Post the incident was kept quiet because one of the bandits was a brother of "a very popular boy in the school graduating this year" and the other was a "juvenile on parole." He said publicity would have embarrassed the honor student.

Robbery Complaint Of Drunk Questioned

Another case held from the records involved a report from a 52-year-old man from Alexandria, Va. (See picture of "C" card elsewhere in the paper). He had been arrested for being drunk, and complained to police he had been robbed of $3500. The police didn't believe him and made a "pocket" case o fhis report.

The Post located the man last week and inquired the status of the police activity on his complaint.

"I don't remember anything about $3500," he said. "I think it is all a mistake."

Editors Reach San Francisco On World Trip

San Francisco, June 29 (AP).—Pan-American Airway's Clipper plane, the America, landed at San Francisco Airport at 12:44 p. m. (Pacific standard time) today on the next to last leg of the airline's inaugural round-the-world passenger service.

The plane, carrying a party of American newspaper editors and publishers and civic officials, left New York June 17. The plane will continue to New York tomorrow.

Several of the editors reflected soberly on the sights they had seen during the last 12 days.

"This is not yet one world," warned Erwin D. Canham, editor of the Christian Science Monitor. "The rapidity with which we interviewed national leaders in war-wrecked countries made this vividly clear. It has convinced most of us, I'm sure, that the enterprise of democracy is just as vital an export item as any other way of life."

Mrs. Ogden Reid, president of the New York Herald-Tribune, said this was her first trip around the world and that it was a rare experience to "see so many countries so quickly—and sleep on the plane, too."

Paul Patterson, publisher of the Baltimore Sun, said he had encountered so much hospitality along the way that he needed to catch up on his sleep.

Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, executive vice president of the Houston Post and former chief of the Women's Army Corps, said China was facing "an extremely grave situation."

County to Act On Rounding Up Of Stray Dogs

The Prince Georges County Board of Commissioners will act on regulations governing collection of stray dogs at its regular meeting in Marlboro tomorrow.

Authorization for this service, effective July 1, was obtained from the State Legislature last spring.

After some pedigreed stock, owned by Mark Hammett, Seat Pleasant farmer, had been seriously injured by dogs several weeks ago, the commissioners ruled that pending further action property owners might shoot stray dogs that endangered livestock.

Tentative plans call for a pound to be established at the County Alms House near Ritchie, Board President William A. Carson said yesterday. Dogs would be picked up by a truck and taken to the pound for a short detention period. If unclaimed at the end of the period, they would be destroyed, he said.

Baltimore Man Drowns in Bay

Annapolis, Md., June 29.—A 31-year-old Baltimore man drowned while swimming in Chesapeake Bay at Bay Ridge Beach near here yesterday afternoon.

The man, Dave Rutt, was found in 3½ feet of water about half an hour later by Donald Potter, 4007 53d st., Bladensburg, Md., and Peter Vance, 4915 30th pl. nw., Washington.

Anne Arundel County Medical Examiner J. M. Claffy, who pronounced Rutt dead, said that he had apparently suffered a heart attack while swimming toward the shore.

Four Investigations Promised On Hidden Crime Complaints

invited to attend this most important meeting," Remon said.

The Washington Criminal Justice Association was incorporated under District laws in May, 1936, to "promote and obtain an efficient administration of criminal justice in the Nation's Capital." Not a vigilante organization, its membership is composed of leading citizens of the District of Columbia.

An agency of the Community Chest, the association employs a paid working staff to aid its investigations.

Police Inspector Ira F. Keck, head of Police District No. 4 comprising Police Precincts 6, 8, 10, 12 and 13, said last night he had read the disclosures in The Post "with interest."

Keck freely admitted "many criminal cases here do not reach public light," and that the system which withholds some cases from official public records "is not authorized under police regulations."

Decision for withholding some cases, he said, rests with the investigating officer or the department head—"which would be the chief of detectives," he said.

Mitigating Circumstances

Inspector Keck said "mitigating circumstances" warrant the withholding of some reports of crime from official files, but added:

"I cannot say this is true in every case not officially entered."

Some mitigating circumstances were listed by Inspector Keck as "family requests"; "juvenile cases"; "crime reports made by drunks who cannot recall any details which would help us solve them," and "cases involving prominent citizens who for reasons of their own do not want crimes against them publicized."

Capt. Floyd Truscott, newly appointed Chief of Detectives to succeed Superintendent-appointed Robert J. Barrett, stated:

"I feel it would be inappropriate to comment at this time on matters that pertain to the work of another department of the police over which I have not assumed control."

Hebert Wants Action

Most biting, congressional comment on the disclosures, came last night from Representative F. Edward Hebert (D., La.) member of the House District Committee, who instigated the Police Department investigation of 1941.

"No one can condone sloppy and inefficient work of this kind," he declared. "If anybody has been doctoring the figures, it should be made known.

"Every doctoring of police figures is serious; there is nothing minor in police work. If it is important enough to some persons to doctor a record, it is important enough to all of us to find out what is going on.

"In 1941, we found the Police Department rotten to the core. But that has changed. I have every confidence in Barrett, but somebody must be doing something funny. It ought to be cleared up and cleared up damn fast. Records are a very important part of police work."

John A. Reilly, president of the Washington Board of Trade, revealed that he had studied disclosures contained in The Post, and was referring the newspaper article to the trade board's public order committee (in charge of Police and Fire Department matters.)

"There is nothing the Board of Trade can say regarding this matter at the moment other than it is interesting information," said Reilly, in disclosing that he was turning it over to the committee chairman, David C. Colladay.

The committee, Reilly said, will be instructed to investigate the matter and "report back in full to the board."

Woolsey W. Hall, president of the Federation of Civic Associations, declared yesterday that he wished to express his organization's "deep gratitude to The Post for a profound public service."

"We are very grateful for the newspaper's opening of this chapter of maladministration in District police affairs," he said. "We are grateful to The Post for putting this light on a very dark subject."

Soviet Blocks Aid Program

plan which they said was prepared for the conference by France and indorsed by Britain.

"It is one thing to ascertain the economic needs of the European countries for American aid in the form of credits and deliveries of goods by means of the estimates drawn up by the European countries themselves," the announcement said. "This is acceptable and may prove very useful to the European countries.

"It will be an entirely different matter if the conference engages in drawing up an all-embracing economic program as envisaged by the French project, and will only in passing ascertain their needs for American economic aid. If the conference deviates to this path it will digress from the task set for it and will fail to yield any positive result."

The foreign ministers—Ernest Bevin, V. M. Molotov and Georges Bidault—were luncheon guests today of Vincent Auriol, President of France.

American officials are not too optimistic about the chances of Russian cooperation. But in their view, the Marshall plan can be made to work with or without the Soviets.

If Russia refuses to alter her position, emergence of a western European bloc with division of the continent is almost a certainty. Bevin has declared that he would not stand for any delay on the part of the Soviet Union.

The Russian statement reiterated the Russian contention that the economic rehabilitation of Europe would be just as vital to the United States as to the European countries assisted.

Rehabilitation of Russia, the statement implied, can be achieved without American aid.

London, June 29 (U.P.).—John Foster Dulles, Republican Party foreign policy adviser, said in a letter published in the Observer today that the American people would help finance Europe's recovery only if European statesmen do not repeat "past follies."

Dulles said "something new and exciting will have happened if European nations can plan to work together so that each does what is best for the whole."

A DETECTIVE BUREAU MIDNIGHT CRUISER REPORT shows two typical robbery reports that were not put on precinct volume books, but were kept in the concealed "C" file in the robbery squad. Unless solved, these cases never appear in police records as a reported crime. Margin notes (circled) made by robbery squad chief show the cases were put on "C" cards and assigned to the detectives named.

Text of Barrett's Explanation For Unreported Complaints

prehensive survey be made of the entire department with respect to the same subject matter.

I feel that the public is entitled to authentic reports on the crime situation in this community. I believe that my predecessors in the office sought to attain that end.

Over a long period of years there has been a custom in the Police Department, without any seeming basis in the regulations, to vest a discretion in the investigating officer to determine whether a crime which has been reported did, in fact, occur.

The placement of this discretion in the investigating officer, I assume, was for the purpose of segregating actual crimes from false reports of crime.

In countless instances crimes are reported as having occurred which, upon investigation, are shown to be without any basis in fact. Generally speaking, these arise under the following circumstances:

1. Where a person has been personally guilty of a crime and seeks to have himself appear to be the victim of a crime. An example of this situation occurred last week when a robbery was reported as having occurred on G st. and a subsequent investigation of which disclosed that the "victim" of the crime had stolen the money himself.

2. Where a person in an intoxicated condition reports a crime to have occurred which, in fact, did not occur.

3. Where persons report the loss of money, or an injury sustained, as having been the result of a commission of a crime when, in fact, the loss, or injury, resulted from their own indiscretion.

In these circumstances the practice has been for the investigating officer to mark the report of the crime as "hold" until such time as a preliminary investigation has been completed, after which the case is marked closed, or further investigated.

There is another classification in which no report is sent to the Statistical Bureau until completion of the investigation. These cases are usually crimes which occur in a given area and apparently are the work of one individual. The purpose behind withholding these reports is to permit more effective investigation and to apprehend the perpetrator.

An example of this class of case is the "stoplight bandits" who committed four robberies on Rhode Island ave. nw., in the vicinity of 10th and 11th sts., a few weeks ago. All of the victims were owners of out-of-town automobiles. No reports of these occurrences were made on the police teletype, but immediately after the first report detectives were sent into the vicinity with automobiles bearing out-of-town tags and within two weeks the perpetrators were apprehended.

It is significant that the perpetrators of the crimes stated the reason they continued operating in that vicinity was that they assumed the persons whom they had robbed, being from out-of-town, had made no report of the robberies because they had seen no reports in the newspaprs.

In this connection, may I state that the objective of the Detective Bureau is to prevent crime and to apprehend criminals. I feel that if the temporary withholding of a report will lead to the apprehension of the criminal then I think the end accomplished justifies the means taken.

WHETHER the authorization given to an officer to mark a report "hold" has led to any abuses, I do not know at this time but I intend to find out. If any abuses have occurred they will be corrected.

Until such time as Captain Bryant and Lieutenant Murray present their full report to me, I cannot state with accuracy how many cases have been "held." However it is my opinion that the figure of 600 cases carried in the article in The Washington Post is inaccurate. I feel that investigation will show that such figure was arrived at by erroneous calculation and widespread duplication.

The Post article on the whole is in terms of generalities. It is my expectation that an investigation will show that all of the cases held by the Detective Bureau can be the subject of reasonable explanation.

The only two cases which are specifically referred to in The Post article are both susceptible to ready explanation, which cannot be of a public nature.

With respect to the assertion in The Post article that these reports were "concealed," I wish to emphatically assert that the best proof that they were not "concealed" is the fact that the reporters were given complete access to all the files when they were requested. I wish also to state that if there is any question whatsoever as to any case reported or handled by the Detective Bureau during my administration, that I will detail men from the bureau to assist any newspaper or any other interested party, in ascertaining the facts of that particular case.

I do not state that the system of reporting crimes is perfect by any means. However, if there are any deficiences that are capable of correction, then correction will be made.

In conclusion may I state that I accept full responsibility for the work of the Detective Bureau and for the men of my command. If investigation shows that there has been any abuse of discretion in holding cases by men of the Detective Bureau, then the responsibility of correcting such abuses is mine.

Wide Drive on To Find 'Cure' For Alcoholics

By Alton L. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Reporter

New York, June 29.—A Nation-wide campaign to spur research in what makes chronic alcoholics drink, and how to cure an estimated 750,000 problem drinkers was announced today by the Research Council on Problems of Alcohol.

"Uncontrolled drinking has been called public health problem number four," the council declared, and "in terms of numbers of people affected and its impact upon the health and social structure of the Nation, it is a more serious problem that tuberculosis."

The council seeks $200,000 a year at the outset and plans a series of research and treatment centers in leading medical schools and their affiliated hospitals.

The council is an associated society of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and is composed primarily of scientists. It has no connection with any prohibition, reform, repeal, or liquor organization or movement.

Of 60 million Americans who drink, "more than three million drink to excess," the council said in a statement. "And there are about 750,000 who are definitely "problem drinkers." Many of them are sick physically.

"There is growing recognition throughout the country . . . that these problem drinkers should be treated as suffering from a disease rather than as willful criminals—that they should be cared for in hospitals rather than punished in jails—and that their rehabilitation depends not upon exhortation to reform, but upon sound medical knowledge."

Some progress has been made in medicine and psychology in developing treatment methods, it added, but prevention still is unsolved.

The council said other immediate objectives were:

Developing a model State law dealing with chronic drinking and revising laws to place problem drinkers under jurisdiction of health rather than legal authorities.

Congress Gets 4 More Bills On 'Must' List

By William F. Arbogast
Associated Press Staff Writer

Bills to cash GI terminal pay bonds and to increase the minimum wage have been added to the "must" program of Congress as it enters the last scheduled month of the session.

Also added to this list are measures to establish the line of succession to the Presidency in case of vacancies and to unify the armed services.

And with final action yet to be taken on 11 of the 12 annual appropriation bills, these four major proposals are expected to keep the congressional nose on the grindstone most of the time between now and the end of July.

House Republican Leader Halleck of Indiana told reporters today there are definite plans for action this session on the four bills.

In addition, many members are clamoring for repassage of the vetoed income tax reduction bill, for universal military training legislation and for anti-poll-tax action.

Three Hearings Today

Three House committees have scheduled hearings today on three of the four "must" measures, while a fourth is getting set.

An Armed Services Subcommittee expects to conclude hearings this week on bills to cash the five-year terminal leave bonds issued to former servicemen and women. It may reach the House floor next week. Involved are an estimated $1,800,000,000 in Government bonds which now can't be cashed until five years after their date of issue. The Senate has not acted on the legislation.

Action may be taken this week by the House Labor Committee on a bill boosting the legal minimum wage scale from 40 cents to 60 cents an hour for workers whose product enters interstate commerce.

The House Expenditures Committee is all but ready to approve an Army-Navy unification bill. It may hold up action until the Senate passes a companion measure now in a position to be voted on in that branch.

House May Get "Succession" Bill

Already passed by the Senate, a bill designating the Speaker of the House as successor to the President in the event of simultaneous vacancies in the offices of President and Vice President may be sent to the House this week by its Judiciary Committee. The House passed a similar bill last year when a Democrat, Sam Rayburn, was speaker. Now a Republican, Joseph W. Martin, jr., is Speaker and "heir apparent" under the succession proposal, which has President Truman's backing.

Whether there will be a renewed drive for a tax reduction bill depends on results of a poll now being made to determine whether a veto could be overridden. The President's veto of a bill cutting taxes as of July 1 was sustained, but a new measure, effective next January 1, has been introduced. Amendments which have been suggested could set back the bill because of possibly extended debate.

Present plans do not call for action this year on universal military training legislation, but many Republican and Democratic House members are endeavoring to have it programmed anyhow.

Boy's State to End Encampment at Fort Meade Today

By The Associated Press

Fort George G. Meade continued yesterday as a center of various youth activities, with 50 Maryland high school students engaged in the politics of their "Boy's State" as 350 Boy Scouts wound up a two-day encampment.

All of this followed in the wake of a "Girl's State," a program sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary as a practical lesson in citizenship and government.

Two delegates to the "Girl's State" were selected on the basis of leadership to represent Maryland in "Girl's Nation" in Washington in the near future. They were Patricia Pine, 17, of Denton, the Girl's State governor, and Susan Miller, 17, of Annapolis.

A corresponding pair will be selected from the male students at today's conclusion of their program, which is sponsored by the American Legion.

Marlborough Hunt Renews Horse Show

The Marlborough Hunt Club will hold its first horse show since before the war on the farm of James B. Bland, near Suitland on July 13. Ralph Powers is chairman and Roland Hartman, manager, of the show.

Included in the 14 events will be 3 for junior riders and 1, over the outside course, closed to hunt club members.

Earle Shows Film Of Erring Wife; Sheila Barrett Labors on 'Dulcy'

—By Richard L. Coe—

AS YOU CAN SEE by the ads, the Earle has unceremoniously yanked "That's My Man" and opens this morning with Ann Sheridan's latest, "The Unfaithful." . . . This, we're told, is the story of a girl who committed "an indiscretion" while her husband was overseas and how their divorce lawyer tried to keep their marriage from going on the rocks. . . . Lew Ayres plays the lawyer and Zachary Scott acts the husband . . . Eve Arden, Jerome Cowan and Steven Geray also are in the cast.

Eve Arden

TOMORROW NIGHT brings the opening, at North Carolina's Manteo, of the tenth season for "The Lost Colony" . . . This is the Paul Green symphonic drama written to celebrate the 350th anniversary of the establishment by Sir Walter Raleigh of a colony which foundered, but which, nonetheless, saw the birth of the first white child in America. . . . Two former tarheel Governors will be on hand, J. Melville Broughton and J. C. B. Ehringhaus . . . They'll only make short talks, though, for they believe with Director Samuel Selden that the play's the thing.

JOHN McGIVER, author of Catholic University's "All Gaul Is Divided," was tapped for an unusual rush job the other day . . . Daniel O'Shea and Robert Ross, president and story editor of Selznick-Vanguard productions, admired his dialogue in the new farce and asked him to do some dialogue work on "Portrait of Jenny," now on location shots of New York with Jennifer Jones and Joseph Cotton . . . O'Shea and Ross were dissatisfied with scenes involving Gus, an Irish cabdriver, and Moore's restaurant . . . They wanted a New York Irish-American flavor in the scene . . . A born New Yorker, McGiver is familiar with how such folk "act, think and drink" and was able to come through with the assignment in four days . . . Nice going Mac.

SHEILA BARRETT'S out in the Olney countryside, which is a strange place to find this lady who, one might think, comes to life in the heart of town and only when the sun goes down . . . But Sheila's laboring on "Dulcy" for tomorrow night's opening at the country playhouse . . . It's the role, by the way, which was created by Lynn Fontanne . . . Sheila insists she's used to the daylight, though . . . If only as a result of wartime trouping for USO, which took her to Saipan and the Marshall Islands . . . We're looking forward to seeing Sheila in a straight comedy, wondering if she'll manage to restrain her mimicry . . . Also, wondering how we're going to get there Tuesday night AND the opening of the Post-Public Library documentary series at the Interior Department.

SATURDAY NIGHT'S closing in New York of "Alice in Wonderland" also meant the end of the American Repertory Theater's first season. . . . And a disastrous season it was, with nearly a half million dollars down the drain. . . . You can't call it all lost, though, for the physical properties remain to the company for possible future use. . . . "Alice" will tour in the fall. . . . With all the good luck wishers in the world, three veterans of the theater—Eva Le Gallienne, Margaret Webster and Cheryl Crawford—certainly took a rough beating. . . . From high costs of labor and construction, largely, but from the Fates, too. . . . And in the midst of it all, Miss Crawford produced, on her own, one of the decade's top musicals, "Brigadoon." . . . That's the most ironic sidelight of it all.

COAST GUARD gold braid takes the spotlight tonight at Keith's. . . . The troubled hero of "The Woman on the Beach" is a Coast Guard lieutenant and the film suggests some of the organization's work. . . . So this will be "Coast Guard Night" at the theater, with Rear Admiral Merlin O'Neill, Assistant Commander of the C. G., Rear Admiral Ellis Reed-Hill, Commodore Halert C. Shepheard and Commodore Norman B. Hall on deck. . . . And there'll be a recruiting booth in the lobby. . . . But if you enlist, you might as well know that Lieut. Robert Ryan has his troubles with Joan Bennett, the female of the title.

FROM TENNESSEE'S Grand Ole Opry, in Nashville, Sidney Lust has snagged the Hollywood Hillbilly Jamboree for visits this week to his Maryland theaters. . . . The Mississippi Quartete, Horsefly, Clarabelle, Bashful Dan, Baby Sandra, Rambling Tommie Scott and his talking doll will be visiting Marlboro today, Rockville's Milo Theater tomorrow and Wednesday, Mount Rainier's Cameo Thursday, the Cheverly, Friday and Hyattsville, Saturday.

ARLENE DAHL is what Hollywood calls lucky, but it's been a long, hard pull, at that, from a Chicago department store to the long-term Warner's contract she now boasts. First she took to modeling, then hit the New York stage, but invariably in short-lived flops. She was in "Mr. Strauss Goes to Boston" and then closed out of town in "Questionable Ladies." But the Warner scouts caught her as you'll soon see when "Possessed" opens at the Earle in a few weeks, starring Joan Crawford and Van Heflin. The drama finds her in a minor role, but Warner's say they have good plans to follow this screen debut.

Jean Aumont, Maria Montez Get Roles in 'Red Feather'

Hollywood—When Jean Pierre Aumont returns from France he'll again co-star with Maria Montez. They'll do "The Red Feather" for Charles Rogers. The story is based on the fascinating career of Pirate Jean Lafitte. Michael Redgrave's reported illness has been greatly exaggerated. He's finished his part in "Mourning Becomes Electra," and will be off to Canada next week for a series of personal appearance. He then leaves for London July 15 to begin rehearsals for "Macbeth." His beautiful wife remains here to work with Charles Boyer in "Mortal Coils" . . . George Stevens liked Rudy Vallee's performance in "The Bachelor and the Bobby Soxer" so much that he gave him the part of Dr. Johnson in "Remember Mama." The role is being especially built up for Rudy who bleaches again for the picture—and wears a blond goatee. It's about time we recognized Rudy's ability. Cary Grant told me that he gave more to a scene than almost any actor he'd ever worked with.

Maria Montez

Treasuring Department

Joan Crawford, the complete movie star both on and off screen, was gifted by Otto Preminger with a dachshund and tons of flowers on the day she started "Daisy Kenyon." Her $400,000 earnings this year looks mighty imposing. So does the $75,000 worth of presents Don Barry is reputed to have given her, because he was so happy that she'd adopted two more children . . . I can't believe the report that Howard Hughes has changed the title of his new picture from "The Sin of Harold Diddlebock" to "Mad Wednesday." The only advantage would be that the latter title would require less lights on the marquees . . . Warner Brothers made more money last year than ever before. And their first quarter this year brought in three million dollars more than the same period in 1946. In spite of this, I hear the boys are retrenching, firing and cutting all kinds of corners. That certainly isn't creating good will.

Reelism in the Film Capital

Phyllis Calvert captivated everyone at Paramount the first day she reported there. She's helping Edith Head design her clothes for "My Own True Love," which is set in post-World War II England. And believe me, Phyllis knows what the ladies could and could not wear during that period. Those rags won't look very pretty on the screen. Edie Head doesn't believe that American women will wear French clothes, as the styles will destroy the appearance of their figures, make them look fantastic and have their beaux whining, "What's wrong with women anyway?" . . . The Jimmy Lydons expect their first baby in February. If it's a girl they'll name her Karen; if a boy, Shawn. It's a funny setup for the expectant father, as in his present picture, "Time of Your Life," he spends his entire time trying to get a date with a girl via telephone . . . Johnny Coy thinks his baby is so beautiful that he takes her riding on streetcars so the passengers can admire her. With the baby in a bright yellow outfit and papa wearing a sweater to match, I must say they attract a lot of attention . . . Jose Iturbi wore his California clothes to London. When he stepped off an American Air Lines plane he had on a bright red shirt, a checkered suit and yellow socks. His arms were laden with hard-boiled eggs and cigars which he distributed among the airport personnel.

Leonard Lyons

Pilot Puzzled by Plural of Goose

New York.—Clyde Pangborn was assigned last month to fly three Grumman planes to Argentina. The planes were of the type called the Grumman Goose. . . . Near the end of the flight Pangborn started to prepare the official reports of the mission. "Delivered three Grumman Geese," he began to write. One of his aides reminded him "That's wrong. There's no such thing as 'Grumman Geese.' The ship is called a Grumman Goose." . . . Pangborn agreed, and corrected it to "Grumman Gooses." He shook his head and sighed: "The plural of Goose certainly isn't Gooses." . . . He finally wrote it: "Delivered a Grumman Goose, and two like it."

Countess Di Frasso

This is the time of year when on all the soap-opera programs a number of characters are heard saying: "Well, I'm leaving for a two-week trip." . . . The radio actors who appear on these daily broadcasts will take their annual vacations. They simply notify the program directors when they plan to leave and to return. The script-writers then write them out for this period. Their absences are explained by an Aunt Hattie, who broadcasts: "Joe, you're tired. How about a trip?" And Joe says: "Yup. Think I'll start right now. Be back in a couple of weeks." Two weeks later the script-writers write them in again.

The Countess Di Frasso, America's peculiar gift to Italian society, whose affections swung from the House of Lombard in Rome to the Flamingo in Las Vegas, once told Billy Rose how she had introduced Bugsy Siegel to Mussolini and the other top men in Rome. "They got along fine," said the countess. "They all liked him" . . . "It's not that they liked Bugsy," Rose suggested. "They were afraid of him."

Recently the director and camera crew shooting New York background scenes for the new movie, "The Naked City," hired a candy store on Rivington st. in the lower East Side as a set for one of the scenes. Extras were hired as customers . . . Harry Kurnitz, the screen writer, volunteered to work as an extra because he once lived in the neighborhood. Kurnitz later was offered a check in payment for his work as an extra. "I'm entitled to a stunt check," Kurnitz insisted . . . "For what? All you did was pretend you're a customer," he was told . . . "I want a stunt check," said Kurnitz, "because I ate Halvah."

The State Department is broadcasting chapters from John Gunther's "Inside the U. S. A." on its programs beamed to Russia . . . Howard Hughes has issued orders to remove his name from all the advertising and publicity on the Preston Sturges-Harold Lloyd movie, "Mad Wednesday" . . . Alex Gard, the caricaturist, is en route to Reno and Las Vegas to do a book of sketches on Nevada . . . When the new New York Theater Co. does its summer shows at the City Center, the program for "Rip Van Winkle" will bear the note, "Intermission—20 Years" . . . Mel Allen, the most popular of big league baseball announcers, will have his own show in the fall . . . Dorothy Stickney uses a 10-cent wedding ring in "Life With Father."

Miss Stickney, wife of the co-author and co-star, Howard Lindsay, doesn't own a wedding ring. They used a 10-cent ring at their wedding.

When Asaf Ali, the new Indian Ambassador to Washington, made a speech on Palestine before the U. N. Special Assembly, he delivered a long and somewhat repetitious address. A U. N. official whispered to the British delegation: "Now you see the responsibility which Oxford bears to the world" . . . Two days later a member of the British delegation whispered to the U. N. official: "Not Oxford. Asaf Ali went to Cambridge."

The Associated Hospital Service Blue Cross Plan in N. Y. has just received a bill for $2,400,500 in a maternity case. The bill covered the expenses involved in the birth of a baby to Blue Cross Plan member Mary Johnson Tweedy, an employe of Time and Life stationed in Shanghai. The hospital bill was at the rate of $120,000 a day . . . The startled officers of the Blue Cross Plan requested further information, and learned that the $2,400,500 is in the inflated Chinese national currency. The total, in American currency, amounted to $201.04. The hospital marked the account closed, on receipt of the Assoc. Hosp. Serv. share, $60.

107 Years' Service

Three in 70s At VA Will Retire Today

Three septuagenarians will retire today from the Veterans Administration. Their combined Government service is 107 years.

Heading the list with the longest Government service record is 70-year-old Robert S. Nichols, sr., 802 58th ave., Fairmont Heights, Md. Nichols started with the Interior Department Pension Bureau in 1902 as a file clerk and worked his way to his present position, assistant to the chief of the VA's Films Section, Veterans' Records Division.

Nichols said he plans to do odds and ends around the house, such as truck farming and raising chickens.

Dr. Ella R. Fales, 72, of 1914 Grace Church rd., Silver Spring, Md., has almost 33 years of Government service behind her. Dr. Fales, who has taught in District public schools and practiced medicine here, has held her present position as medical rating specialist in VA's Claims Service since 1933.

Ruth Gist, 70, of 1028 Connecticut ave. nw., entered Government service in 1918 with the former Bureau of War Risk Insurance, whose activities were later taken over by the VA. Miss Gist is retiring as a ledger account clerk in the Payees Account Service of VA.

Jap Premier Opposed

Tokyo, June 29 (AP).—Japanese newspapers reported today that the seven cabinet members belonging to the Conservative Democratic Party had lined up solidly against Socialist Premier Tetsu Katayama in his plan to nationalize the coal industry.

Indorse Virginia Hospital

Veterans' Hospital Advocated In Northern Va. by Legion

Resolutions indorsing a veterans hospital in northern Virginia and universal military training were adopted by delegates to the annual eighth District convention of the American Legion in Alexandria yesterday.

Without specifying a site, the delegates unanimously approved a resolution for establishment of a hospital for veterans in the Virginia area "adjacent to the District of Columbia."

The measure did not specifically mention the Nevius tract, already designated as the site of the proposed hospital.

The resolution indorsing universal military training called on Virginia legislators to "keep Congress in session until a definite program of universal training is adopted."

The delegates elected John Minnigh, of Alexandria, as district commander for the current year to succeed Theodore M. Forne, of Arlington, who presided at the business sessions of the conclave.

Other new officers are John Flannery, Culpeper, senior vice commander; Lawrence Batson, Arlington, junior vice commander, and Mrs. Grace Downing, Alexandria, adjutant.

More than 200 delegates from Alexandria and seven northern Virginia counties attended the two-day convention.

Prince Georges Juvenile Court Ready to Begin

Prince Georges County Juvenile Court, authorized by the State Legislature last session, assumes jurisdiction tomorrow.

The opening session is scheduled for the Marlboro Police Court where Trial Magistrate Arthur P. Owens will sit tomorrow afternoon. Sessions will be held in Hyattsville court on Thursday afternoons with Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie sitting during the coming month. The judges exchange courts on alternate months.

Establishment of the court after four years of campaigning by civic and school groups represents a compromise between those groups and the county administration.

The principal point of compromise lies in the extension of the jurisdiction of the police magistrates to include the Juvenile Court.

The County P-TA Council campaigned during last winter's legislative session for establishment of a separate and distinct court for youthful offenders. The County Board of Commissioners, on the other hand, felt the present Police Court system should be continued.

Points of agreement included appointment of a probation officer for the Juvenile Court and providing separate detention cells for juveniles. The detention cells have not been provided yet, but provision for them is included in plans for contemplated additions to county buildings in Marlboro and Hyattsville.

"Although it is not quite the court we had hoped for, we are indeed happy to see the Juvenile Court begin to function," Mrs. Wells Harrington, president of the P-TA Council, said yesterday. "We will study the results of its operation during the next two years so that we can make recommendations for changes in its methods to the next legislative session, if it should prove necessary. We hope it will succeed in cutting down delinquency."

What's hot as a and pretty as a

White sidewall tires, as illustrated, will be supplied at extra cost as soon as available.

In two short words—this one!

This big and brawny beauty with the trim, bold front and the long sweep-through fenders.

This broad-chested traveler with the big Fireball straight-eight engine and the spirit of lively action in every line and movement.

This gracious, spacious carriage that seats three in comfort both front and back — handles light as a baby's stroller — strides always level and smooth on big, soft, cushiony coil springs on each of its four wheels.

This stout and ready Buick, fresh in looks as tomorrow's daisies, rugged as a battle cruiser, and full of zip and pepper as a string of popping firecrackers.

You're looking at America's most wanted car every time you see one.

You're looking at the forecaster of fashion, the top star on performance, the standout buy for size, room, steadiness, comfort.

So naturally it's in demand. In such steady demand, in fact, that about the most Buick's slowly mounting production can do is move you a little faster from the bottom of our waiting list to the top.

Needless to say, we'll do all we can to speed that process. We'll take your order any time, with or without a trade-in, and get you your Buick the minute your number comes up.

But we can't do more than you'll authorize us to do — which means we're stymied till you get your order in.

De Gaulle Sees Peril in U. S., Red Rivalry

Lille, France, June 29 (AP).—Gen. Charles de Gaulle said today Russia's domination of two-thirds of the European continent had created one of the most dangerous world situations in history.

De Gaulle, leader of a national unity movement, spoke at ceremonies in this northern French town where 86 Frenchmen were massacred by the Germans in April, 1944. His appearance was sponsored by a veterans' resistance group.

He criticized the present French government as ineffective.

Russia is matched by a powerful America and the rivalry of these two threatens to end "sooner or later in a gigantic conflict from which no people and no man on earth wil be spared," he said.

De Gaulle described America as "inspired by an ardent ideal of freedom and democracy." He said the United States was alarmed "at the character they think they see in Russia's expansion."

He said he personally had not yet abandoned hope that the world would learn to cooperate and did not believe Russia was ready to embark "in the near future on a violent conquest of the world."

Despite her weakness, de Gaulle continued, France has a vital role to play in organizing Europe as an "element of equilibrium" between Russia and America to preserve peace.

"I mean by that a Europe formed of free men and independent states," he explained.

Too Many Batteries, Philco Sells Plant

Philadelphia, June 28 (U.P.).—The Philco Corp. tonight announced the sale of its big Trenton, N. J., storage battery plant to the National Battery Co.

M. W. Heinritz, Philco vice president, said the sale was the result of Philco's inability to market its battery plant's output at the same time that The Gould Corp., a national battery subsidiary, maintained a growing back-log of battery orders.

Tear Gas Used to Break Up Italian Riots

Venice, Italy, June 29 (AP).—Rioting between Centrists and heckling Leftists broke out during a speech by Premier Alcide de Gasperi here today and police finally quelled the fighting with tear gas.

A police captain, 10 agents and many demonstrators were injured after a Communist-Socialist crowd forced its way into an outdoor mass meeting of De Gasperi's Christian Democratic followers.

The demonstration was the most forthright challenge to De Gasperi's authority since his formation June 1 of a cabinet from which the Communists and Socialists were excluded.

Approximately 9000 persons were assembled in St. Mark's Square to hear De Gasperi, when the crowd of Leftists approached from the industrial section of the city.

Heavy police forces succeeded at first in hemming the hostile demonstrators into one side of the square, and the Christian Democrats into the other.

Fistfights soon broke out and the Leftists booed and jeered.

De Gasperi pleaded repeatedly for order and criticized the Communists and Socialists for "this example of partisan intolerance."

"You are jeering a man who for years has fought—and still fights—for liberty and democracy," he said. "The government wishes to defend above all the principles of liberty, and that liberty will end by conquering violence."

Finally police fired the tear gas, but the wind shifted suddenly and the acrid fumes—meant for the Leftists—blew across into the massed ranks of the Christian Democrats. That broke up the meeting.

NAZI TORPEDOES RECOGNIZED THEIR CITIZENSHIP---

During the war thousands of foreign-born seamen served valiantly in our merchant marine, braving mines, torpedoes and bombing attacks to deliver the goods to our far-flung armies. Many were torpedoed, some of them more than once. They kept the life-line of democracy open at peril of their lives.

THEIR REWARD— A BROKEN PROMISE

These seamen want to be and deserve to be American citizens. During the war an interdepartmental government ruling denied them the chance even to apply for citizenship.

The State Department, War Shipping Administration, and the Immigration and Naturalization Service, responsible for that denial, had PROMISED them their citizenship applications would be given "due consideration" after the war in recognition of their service to our country. THESE PROMISES HAVE NOT BEEN KEPT.

Instead, these men are being arbitrarily barred from their ships and deprived of their livelihood.

HEROES FACE DEPORTATION

Public Law 27, which went into effect June 1, 1947, bars employment on our ships to the skilled war-service seamen. Furthermore, it threatens them with deportation proceedings if they remain on U. S. soil more than 29 days.

Foreign-born workers ashore are permitted to become citizens. Aliens in our armed forces become eligible for citizenship after three months. But to foreign-born seamen with more than three years' wartime service on U. S. ships, we say, "Get out!" Is this the way to treat heroes?

WHAT ABOUT IMMIGRATION QUOTAS?

The immigration quotas of many countries are filled, some of them for the next ten years. These seamen desire citizenship now, not in the future. Many have American wives and children. This is their home. This is the country they fought for. This is where they want to stay.

WOULD DISRUPT SHIPPING

Secretary of State Marshall says that interruption in our shipping would cause a grave international crisis. Removing these men could tie up ships and disrupt commerce in every port of the country. Why? Because right now there is a serious manpower shortage in many skilled ratings.

WHAT MUST BE DONE?

1. Wire your Congressman to intercede on behalf of these merchant marine heroes, prevent their deportation, and support legislation to enable them to become citizens.
2. Fill out the coupon below and mail it TODAY to President Truman.

Dear Mr. President:

We respectfully urge you to issue an Executive Order to permit skilled war-service foreign-born seamen to continue to serve in the American Merchant Marine. Nats Win First, but Lose 2d to Yanks

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

YOU'D HAVE TO SAY the best pitcher in the American League is neither Bob Feller nor Hal Newhouser, but a young Irishman named Frank Shea from Naugatuck, Conn., who laughingly says so himself. His American League affiliation is the Yankees, and his record of 9 wins and 2 defeats is the league's best.

POVICH

The Yankees get a belt not only out of Shea's fancy pitching that has put them in first place, but they cotton to the rookie as a character—a right-handed Gomez as it were—who sheds the tension of baseball with his by-play in the locker room.

The other day they came upon him in the clubhouse mimicking a baseball broadcaster, with a bat handle held to his chin to simulate microphone and unperturbed when his teammates walked in on his act. He was saying: "And now it's Frank Shea, wotta pitcher, who's on the mound for the Yankees . . . The great Frank Shea from Naugatuck, Conn. With his blinding fast ball and scrumptious curve . . . Ladies and gentlemen, the major leagues have never seen the equal of Frank Shea, from Naugatuck, Conn. . . . And now we give you Frank Shea himself . . ."

THAT ISN'T THE EXTENT of Rookie Shea's repertoire, though. He convulses his Yankee mates with take-offs on Charley Keller, sulking in front of his locker, and Joe DiMaggio sitting on a trunk and looking into space. Somehow, there never was any inclination among the older Yankees to regard Shea as a fresh busher despite the fact he never pitched a big league game until last April.

His cockiness is out, and he's a dead serious guy when he's working, but that doesn't go between innings, when he's the cut-up on the Yankee bench. As the Yankees' top pitcher he not only throws his weight around with his gags, but he throws his voice around somewhat also, being an amateur ventriloquist.

He's a pretty good trencherman, too, and when the Yankees' traveling secretary called him last month about signing four meal checks in one day, he was unperturbed. It was a rib anyway, and when he was asked by what right he charged a fourth meal to the club, he just winked and said, "Take a look at the 7-and-1 pitching record of mine and don't ask silly questions."

SHEA ALMOST DISRUPTED the Naugatuck school system on the day he made his first big league start and lost a 1-0 game to the Red Sox in Yankee Stadium in April. So many Naugatuck school children played hookey to watch the game or listen on the radio that the school had to call off the final exams. Last week in Yankee Stadium on Shea Day, the Naugatuck folks presented him with a car, a watch, and the inevitable traveling bag.

Manager Bucky Harris hasn't pandered to Shea. He's given him the tough games to pitch. Three times Harris sent the lad against Hal Newhouser and on each occasion he beat the Tigers, twice with four-hitters, once with a five-hitter. Two of the victories were shutouts. The only games he lost were his first start when he held the Red Sox to three hits and was licked, 1-0, by Hughson's two-hitter, and an 11-inning 3-2 defeat by Chicago.

The only club Shea hasn't licked is the Athletics, but that is understandable because he hasn't faced them yet. He didn't pitch in Washington yesterday because Harris is saving him for today against the Red Sox in Boston. His curve isn't as good as Newhouser's and his fast ball is not as fast as Feller's, but every pitch he throws is "live" and does something.

THE YANKEE ORGANIZATION had Shea tabbed late in 1945, before he won 15 and lost 5 for Oakland in the Coast League last season. The Yanks went up to Waterbury, Conn., for an exhibition game with a factory club called the Brasscos, and were shut out, 1-0, by Mr. Shea. Inasmuch as Shea was already Yankee property, Manager Joe McCarthy was not quite saddened by the defeat.

He was in the Yankee camp at Panama last season, but came down with appendicitis and never got a chance to work. Yankee Scout Paul Kritchell, who dug up Phil Rizzuto, George Stirnweiss and Bill Johnson for the club, signed Shea six years ago after watching him pitch school ball in Connecticut.

On his way to sign Shea, Kritchell had difficulty. He was overhauled by a Connecticut speed cop who suspected him of being a hit-and-run driver. "I'm a Yankee scout," Kritchell protested. "I'm on my way to Naugatuck to sign a pitcher named Shea." Whereupon the cop said, "If it's Frank Shea, what are you waiting for? You've got a police escort."

He Can Use His Umbrella in Shower

Harrisburg, Pa., June 29 (AP).—The Interstate League game between Harrisburg and Lancaster was delayed nearly an hour by a steady rain last night, so Manager Charley English of the Lancaster club went into the coaching box in the first inning under an umbrella. The umpires banished him.

All three meets will take place at College Park.

South Carolina's team includes Southern Conference champions Chuck Spann, 175, and Ray Avant, 145. Durnas Turner coaches the South Carolina squad.

Clemson, nosed out for the Conference title by Maryland by only three points, will show Southern Conference champions Jerry Orr, 130, and Carl Pulkinen, 125. Col. Bob Jones coaches the Clemson team.

Behrens Favored In Title Net Play

Charlottesville, Va., June 29 (AP).—Herbert (Buddy) Behrens, the husky Fort Lauderdale, Fla., lad who rated No. 2 seeding in the National junior listing last year, loomed as the odds-on favorite today to cop the National Interscholastic tennis championship when tournament play gets underway here tomorrow on the University of Virginia courts.

Barclay Wins NCAA Golf

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 29 (AP).—Dave Barclay of Michigan, 26-year-old former Army bomber navigator, today defeated Louisiana State University's star freshman, Jack Coyle, 1-up on the 36th hole to win the 50th annual National Collegiate Golf tournament.

The square-jawed Rockford, Ill., sharpshooter almost saw his big chance slip away on the 35th green when Coyle sank a 50-foot chip shot for a birdie three that narrowed Barclay's lead to a single hole.

Earlier, Barclay, gaining confidence and a putting touch, had gone into a 3-up lead on the twenty-eighth, twenty-ninth and thirtieth holes. He eased off as Coyle picked up the thirty-fourth with a par 4 and threatened to square the court on the thirty-fifth with his sensational chip shot.

However, the Michigan captain matched Coyle stroke for stroke on the thirty-sixth to bring Michigan its first individual NCAA title since Chuck Kocsis, Michigan Open champion, captured it in 1936.

Coyle, 21-year-old former Navy man who spearheaded Louisiana State to its team championship earlier in the week, finished tre morning18-hole round one down to Barcley. At the twenty-seventh he evened the count, after Barclay had left a 2-hole lead slip away, but his usually steady game began to falter as he shot three straight holes one over par.

Coyle Former Finalist In Post Tourney

Jack Coyle, of LSU, who was beaten in yesterday's final for the NCAA golf title by Michigan's Dave Barclay, is a former finalist in the Post's Schoolboy golf Tournament.

Coyle attended Georgetown Prep in 1941-42 and in the latter year reached the finals losing out to Arthur Myers of Roosevelt, two and one. Coyle was Illinois state schoolboy champion at the time.

Braves Take Lead Again By Whipping Phils Twice

Boston, June 29 (AP).—Boston's battling Braves regained the National League lead, with a half game to spare on the Brooklyn Dodgers, by overtaking the Phillies for a 10-inning 8-7 triumph and winning, 4-2, in the nightcap. Bill Voiselle pitched a five-hitter in the second game.

The Dodgers dropped off the top rung after splitting a twin bill with the New York Giants.

Bob Elliott's double against the centerfield fence scored Johnny Hopp with the deciding run in the opener, after the Tribesmen had exploded a two-run rally for a 7-7 tie in the ninth.

During a managerial battle of wits to get his righthanded batters against southpaws and vice versa, Billy Southworth used 19 players, including four pitchers, during the first game. The Phillies had to call upon five flingers during nearly three hours of action that included home-runs by Al Lakeman and Andy Seminick.

Going into today's twin bill, Del Ennis had hit in 16 consecutive games for the visitors and he lengthened that string, now the longest in the National League, by getting a single in the first tilt and his fifth homer with two out and nobody on in the last inning of the nightcap.

While gaining his first decision for the Braves, Voiselle was aided by the lusty clubbing of Elliott and Earl Torgeson. Elliott pounded out a pair of two-baggers and a single, while scoring three times, and Torgy drove him in once with his eleventh homer of the season.

Yankees Need Only One Win To Collect 'Bonus'

The Yankees, who meet the Red Sox today at Boston, are on the threshold of adding new $100 suits of clothes to their wardrobe.

Following their defeat in Philadelphia last Thursday, President Larry MacPhail of the Yankees telephoned Manager Bucky Harris that the club would buy the new raiment for the players "If they win four of their next five games."

Yesterday's second-game victory over the Nats represented three victories in four games for the Yanks since MacPhail's promise. A victory in Boston today will fetch them the clothes.

Miss Wilkins, a finch junior college student, was unseeded. She won the National Junior Indoor Singles title in 1944-45-46. Mrs. Barber had been New York State titlist eight times.

Fain Hits Grand Slam Suder Wins Opener

Philadelphia, June 29 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics smashed out three home runs to defeat the Boston Red Sox twice today 3 to 2 and 6 to 5.

An inside-the-park homer with the bases loaded by First Baseman Ferris Fain highlighted a five-run fifth inning for the A's in the second game while Pete Suder's first circuit clout of the season won the opener in the six inning. Sam Chapman for the A's and Wally Moses and Ted Williams, for the Sox, also homered during the afternoon.

Suder's home run broke a 2-2 deadlock and enabled Phil Marchildon to win in a pitcher's duel with Dave Ferris.

Barney McCosky's consecutive game hitting stretch was halted at 12 as he went hitless in four trips in the opener.

Bums Take First, 4-3; Mize Homers

New York, June 29 (AP).—Home runs by Sid Gordon, Johnny Mize and Willard Marshall highlighted a six-run eighth inning for the New York Giants and enabled them to defeat the Brooklyn Dodgers 9-5 in the second game of a doubleheader today.

The Dodgers eked out a 4-3 win in the opener with a two-run rally in the ninth.

A crowd of 52,147 saw the Dodgers lose the National League lead to the Boston Braves as a result of their split.

Ken Trinkle came to Dave Koslo's relief in the sixth inning of the nightcap to gain his fifth triumph although Ed Stanky rapped him for a homer in the ninth with one on. The Giants batted Hal Gregg out in the eighth when Gordon, Mize and Marshall blasted four-baggers.

Jackie Robinson, who singled in the tying run and scored the winning run in the ninth inning of the first game, made four hits in five times at bat in the second, to stretch his hitting mark through 16 consecutive games. He also stole his twelfth and thirteenth bases of the year.

After falling behind, 3-2, when Buddy Kerr hit his second homer of the season in the last half of the eighth, the Dodgers sprang their winning rally in the ninth when Stanky led off with a double and scored the tying run on Robinson's single.

Robby stole second, went to third on Pee Wee Reese's sacrifice and scored when pinch hitter Arky Vaughan beat out an infield hit to first baseman Mize.

Joseph and Volk Enter Auto Race

Mike Joseph and Lew Volk, two of the leading eastern Ford V-8 drivers, and George Fonder, top money winner at Lanham last season, last night had entered the Independence night midget auto racing field set for the West Lanham, Md., Speedway Friday at 8:30 p. m.

Ed "Dutch" Schaefer, who captured a semifinal and the 25-lap feature as well last week-end, also will compete.

Fonder, sidelined last Friday because the necessary repairs could not be rushed through on the $10,900 Offenhauser car of John Giacofci, definitely will return to action. The local man's machine won five features and finished in the money in nine of the first 11 big races it entered this season, and is termed by rival pilots the hottest car in the east.

A new feature will be introduced Friday at 3 p. m. when Volk opens a school of free instruction for those interested in midget car racing on the Lanham track.

Avenger, 33-1 Shot, Wins Big Paris Race

Paris, June 29 (AP).—Avenger, a rank outsider, owned by Prince Ali Khan, won the Grand Prix de Paris for 3-year-olds at Longchamps today nad paid his backers 33 to 1 as Pearl Diver, winner of the English Derby, finished out of the money.

The winner collected four million francs ($40,000) for his victory over the 3000-meter course.

Nats Win First, Lose 2d to Yanks

another run because Spence who had previously walked, was picked off second when he stumbled trying to return to the bag on a routine throw.

Robinson's double to left launched a two-run Yankee fifth. Rizzuto singled to center to score him, and took second on Spence's throw to the plate. Sacrificed to third, he scored after Lewis' catch of Stirnweiss' foul fly.

It was frustration for the Nats after that. They filled the bases with one out in the sixth and got nothing. Vernon walked, Spence doubled high off the right field wall and Grace drew an intentional pass from Johnson who then retired in favor of Reynolds. The latter got out of the mess when Priddy grounded into a double play.

Again in the next inning, the Nats were double play victims after putting two on with one out. Christman singled and Pinch hitter Travis walked, whereupon Yost grounded to Rizzuto for a double play.

Reynolds Bears Down

Behind, 2-1, in the eighth, Vernon singled and stole second with one out, but Reynolds dismissed both Spence and Grace on strikeouts. And in the ninth when they got the tying runs on again with two out after Christman singled and Robertson walked, Reynolds upped and fanned Yost.

Mark Christmas collected half of the six hits of the Nats in that second game. . . . When DiMaggio went hitless in the opener, it marked the end of a nine-game hitting streak for him . . . Infielders and umpires were busy shooing a persistent gray pigeon off the base paths during both games . . . The Nats' first run in the eighth inning of the opener came as a surprise to both Travis who hit the ball and McQuinn who fielded it. It was a hit down the first base line that both presumed was foul, but Umpire McGowan called it fair, and Vernon crossed the plate from third without drawing a throw.

Marino Plans Scottish Stay

Glasgow, June 29 (AP).—Dado Marino of Honolulu plans to remain in Scotland all summer and, if he wins the world flyweight title from Champion Jackie Paterson here July 9, will return next year to defend his title, Promoter Charles Black said today.

Sad Sam Ichinose, Marino's manager, said he had agreed to these plans.

"Marino is the most colorful and attractive personality Scottish boxing has ever known," Black said.

"He will make a farewell appearance in a non-title fight in Glasgow September 17 and he has undertaken to return later to defend his title if he wins July 9."

His September 17 opponent has not been selected yet.

Paterson, whose illness three days before the original date of the title bout, June 11, caused a month's postponement, meanwhile has aroused a storm of protest by announcing his intention to resume conducting his dance band.

Black, who estimates the title fight already has been cut 10,000 pounds ($40,000) by the postponement, has threatened to report the matter to the British boxing board of control.

Paterson said he would make only one ballroom appearance.

Sad Sam is also annoyed.

"This carrying on is bad publicity," he said.

Paterson's purse will not be affected by the attendance, but Marino is to get a share of the gate.

Strenuous ring work for the whole of this week is the program for both Dado and Paterson.

Ichinose said today that Dado "in his 40 previous fights has never been so fit as he is now. He has been doing a lot of road work and now he will do more sparring with the local boy, Skeets Gallacher, and Tommy Blondin, and Tsuneshi Maruo from Honolulu."

Supreme Zimiri Wins Trot Race

Richmond, Va., June 29 (AP).—Supreme Zimiri, a seven-year-old black horse owned by D. A. Cantwell, of Annapolis, Md., and driven by Milton Hubbard, won both dashes of the free-for-all pace, feature event of the harness races today at the Atlantic Rural Exposition track here before a crowd of 1500.

The winner shook off a challenge by Hartley, from the Emmetsburg, Md., stables of Mrs. George Gingell, to annxe the first dash, but was hard put to it to beat the same horse in the second dash. The times for the feature were 2:12 and 2-11 3-5, excellent going for the track which was left "cuppy" after Saturday's heavy rain.

Luck of the Irish

Owing, Md., June 29.—The Irish War Vets of Washington broke a 6-6 tie in the eleventh inning to defeat the Owing's Eagles, 7-6, here today.

Cards Biff Reds, 17-2, Lose First

St. Louis, June 29 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds and the St. Louis Cardinals each gained a decision in a pair of wild slugging matches today, the Redlegs winning the opener 9 to 7 and Cards rallying to overwhelm their opponents, 17 to 2 in the nightcap.

The teams banged out a total of 44 hits in the two contests, and 13 pitchers were called on to display their stuff—or lack of it.

The cards used 21 players, including five pitchers, in the first game in a vain effort to duplicate their Friday and Saturday night feats of salvaging a seemingly lost cause in the late innings.

Eddie Miller hit a homer in the third.

The second game resembled a town lot affair, with the Cards scoring almost at will. They counted 15 times in the first three innings and Southpaw Al Brazle coasted to his easiest victory of the season. Enos Slaughter batted in seven runs and Ron Northey contributed a two-run homer. Sloughter also batted across three runs in the first game, giving him a total of 10 for the afternoon.

Hogan's 14-Under Par 270 Wins Victory

Bennings Says

At Charles Town

DEAR FOLKS:

Members of the Charles Town branch of the Loyal Order of Moose staged a big party here last Friday night. Saturday the hunch was there when Party Moose went to the post. Few if any of the Loyal sons of the realm were there. Of course, Party Moose paid a healthy $66 and put the finishing touches on a $692 daily double. Walter Haight, the horse, and Aiken were shipped in over the week-end from Delaware Park for Marvin Green to train. Jockey Willie Kelly, injured in a training accident last week, left the hospital Saturday. He will be unable to ride for months. W. G. Jones' Tap Lightly and Mibill D. were shipped in from Delaware Park. Jimmy Baird, leading rider here, loses his 5-pound apprentice allowance at the end of the July 2 program. Carroll Bowers has succeeded V. S. McClintock as the trainer of Patty Boy. Roman Boy, one of the speed champions of other years, will swing into action on the Monday program and, as usual, probably will be the favorite in his sprint. The meeting here closes on July 22. Then the set-up is Bel Air, Hagerstown, Cumberland, Timonium and Marlboro. See you on the rail.

Luckless Sam Snead Second, 274

Chicago, June 29 (AP).—Ben Hogan of Hershey, Pa., vaulted into professional golf's top money-winning spot today by winning the $15,000 Chicago Victory national golf tournament at Westward Ho course with a 14-under-par 270.

Little Ben methodically moved into the lead at the 54-hole mark. He fired a one-under-par 70 in the closing 18-hole round to finish four strokes ahead of luckless Sam Snead of Hot Springs, Va., who had 274 after a final 69.

Snead, who led the first two rounds but faltered yesterday with a damaging 75, barely salvaged second place from Ellsworth Vines, the rangy former tennis star from Chicago, whose 70 today gave him a 275.

Hogan's closing round over the par 71, flat Westward Ho course was his poorest after 66—68—66. He grabbed first money of $2000 to swell his 1947 winnings to $16,567, and passing Jimmy Demaret of Ojai, Calif. Demaret finished with a feeble 284, even par.

Hogan tapped an opening one-under-par 34 and held a four-stroke lead over Snead at 63 holes. And it was all over after that.

Jim Ferrier stroked an even par 35-36 on his closing round for a 276.

Rounding out the top leaders were Al Smith of Danville, Va., with 278; Toney Penna of Cincinnati, Ohio, 279, Dick Metz of Arkansas City, Kan., 280, and Johnny Palmer, Badin, N. C., Herman Keiser of Akron, Ohio, and Ed Furgol of Royal Oak, Mich., tied at 281.

It was the first major victory for Hogan since he won the Colonial Invitational at Ft. Worth, Tex., in mid-May and only his fourth 1947 triumph, exclusive of his win with Demaret in the Miami four-ball meet last March.

Snead, who two weeks ago dropped the U. S. Open title when he blew a 30-inch putt and hasn't won a tourney since last December, was inches away from a scorching closing round.

Revolta and Johnny Barnum of Chicago, who was the top amateur among 19 Simon-Pures with one-over-par 285, took first place in the concurrent pro-amateur competition with 418. Nine strokes behind with 427 were Snead and Jimmy Frisina of Taylorville, Ill.

British Open Course Toughene As 258 Begin Play Today

Hoylake, England, June 29 (AP).—Officials today set a backbreaking par of 68 for the four-mile long Hoylake golf course over which five Americans will compete against a field of 258 for the British Open golf championship starting tomorrow.

This par equals the 11-year-old course record held by Henry Cotton, who will try once more to stem American domination of British golf as he did by capturing the Open in 1934 after 10 straight triumphs by Uncle Sam's linksmen.

Sam Snead, the pro from Hot Springs, Va., won the title last year but is not defending his crown. America's hopes rest with Johnny Bulla, the plane pilot from Phoenix, Ariz., who was runner-up in 1939 and 1946; Vic Ghezzi, the big pro from Kansas City, who arrived yesterday; Frank Stranahan, the crack Toledo, Ohio, amateur; Robert Sweeny, jr., California-born London businessman who was a spare on the U. S. Walker Cup team this year; and Sergt. Charles (Chuck) Jennings of Medford, N. J., currently stationed with the U. S. Air Force at Wiesbaden, Germany.

Eighteen hole qualifying rounds will be played tomorrow and Tuesday over Hoylake and Arrowe Park but the 72-hole championship test will be contested only at Hoylake, starting Wednesday.

Hoylake measures around 7000 yards and Arrowe Park's layout is about 600 yards shorter.

The course itself is considered here to be England's best and most difficult.

Most of it lies flat. Deep, tangled roughs hold out disaster for any error, and score-mangling bunkers ambush every velvety green.

The championship course ordinarily runs 7048 yards with a par of 72. But the championship committee shaved about 100 yards off its length and trimmed four easy par fives to rugged fours.

The Simon-pure qualifiers will join 35 others who have been ruled exempt from the trial run by Tam president, Greoge S. May, to make up a field of about 55 in the All-American amateur side-show.

The amateurs will play over a 72-hole route in medal competition. The All-American Open, with a total prize list of $30,401, and the All-American women's open will run simultaneously.

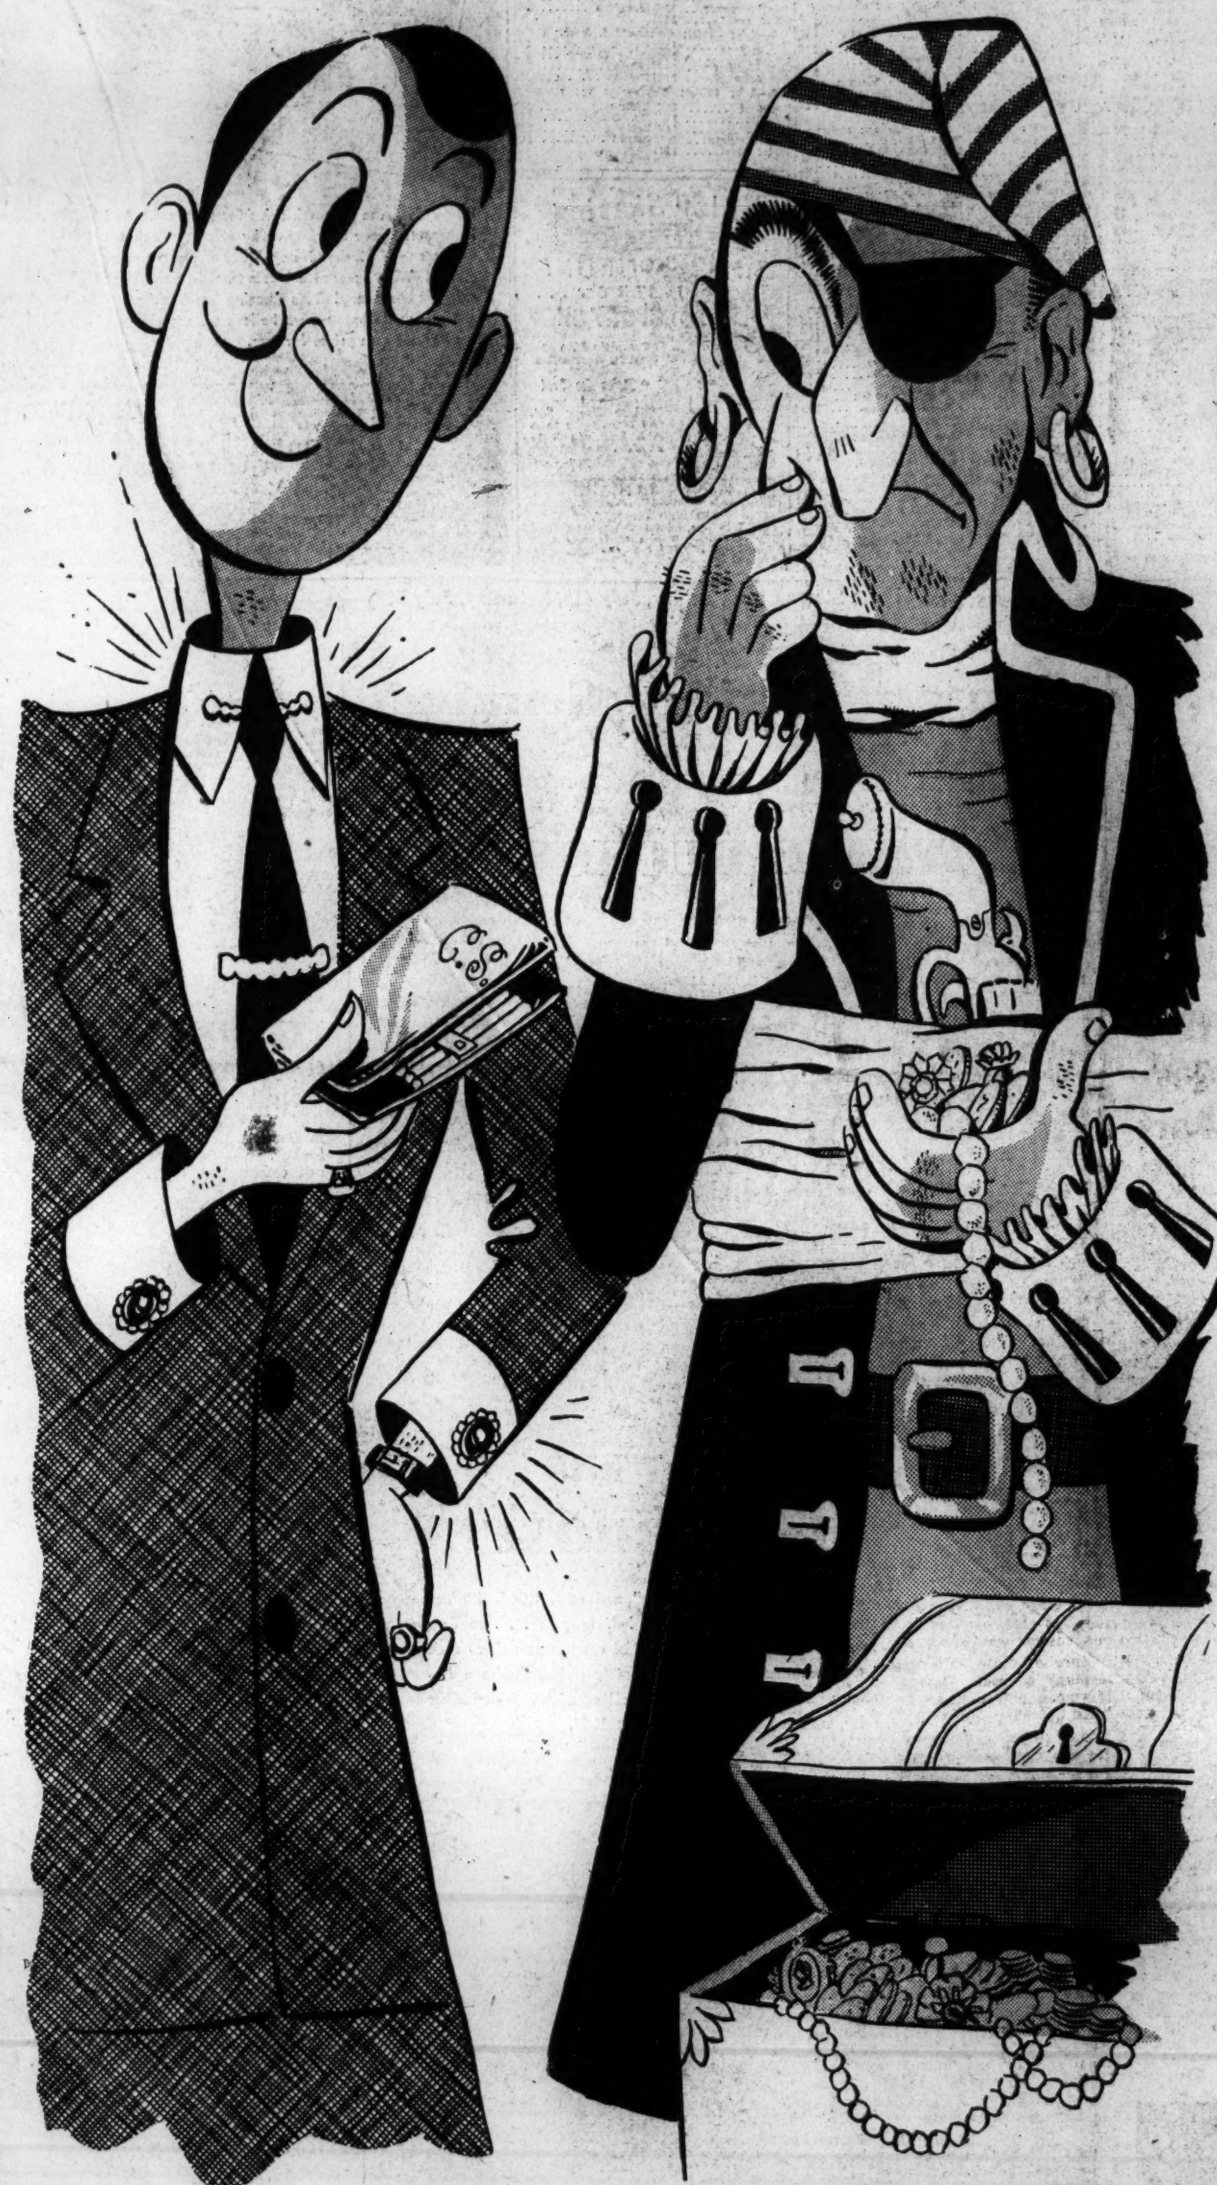
the treasure buried by pirates of old . . . . . can never compare to our pieces of GOLD!



- This Pirate's eye is quick to see that his ill-gotten gold looks puny indeed . . . compared with modern-day Treasures of Gold from Schwartz. We'll admit he's a proud buccaneer. . . . and experienced hand with Buried Treasure . . . a throat-cutting yegg, too . . . and not given to gentle acting with the 18th-century gat in his belt. But we think we've got the old boy where he's about to swear off the sea . . . in favor of an honest living . . . shelling oysters or writing his memoirs of the Spanish Main.

- Even Long John Silver or Captain Kidd would stare with envy at the Gold Jewelry fashioned by Schwartz craftsmen. Centuries of skill and precision and good taste go into each and every Fine Creation of Gold in the Schwartz collection. There are delicately engraved pins and brooches . . . simple wedding bands of beauty and dignity . . . exquisitely shaped earrings and costume jewelry. You will thrill, too, at the beauty of Schwartz Gold watches, Gold cigarette lighters and cases, Gold compacts and Gold lipstick holders.

- Each one is a Star in its own right . . . destined to shine as an enduring treasure in the years and decades to come. As any local octogenarian can tell you, the Schwartz reputation for the finest in Gold comes from generations of experience and service.

- There is a Golden Treasury here to meet the needs of every purse . . . and every taste. Our experts will be glad to counsel you . . . and to guide you to creations of the world's master artisans. So remember, for the gift that counts . . . and endures . . . make it a treasure of Gold from Schwartz, a Great Name in Jewelry in the Nation's Capital.

WASHINGTON: MONDAY, JUNE 30, 1947

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Ax May Not Fall As Soon as Planned

RELIEF: That ax hanging over a score of Federal agencies may not be dropped as soon as it had been planned.

Agencies like the Office of Government Reports, Export Control, Commodity Credit, Reconstruction Finance, National Housing and many others will be ordered to continue their operations until a definite decision on their futures is made by Congress.

In a widely overlooked action, the Senate approved a joint resolution which would continue these and other agencies temporarily. Moreover, it would also permit Federal agencies to pay their employes even though their 1948 appropriation bills are hung up by Congress.

Chairman Bridges of the Senate Appropriations Committee, explained his measure in this way:

"If a certain agency is to be discontinued as the result of the Appropriations Act of 1948, it will still continue up to the time the particular appropriation bill is passed. In other words, if we provide no money for a certain agency and it is automatically to pass out of existence, it will continue in operation until the appropriation bill is passed and signed by the President."

Bridges said his measure also would permit benefits to be paid to veterans and all other bills to be paid by the Federal agencies even though their appropriation bills have not been enacted.

The measure, which must be okayed by the House, will clear the confusion and make for orderly government.

MARITIME: Furlough notices to 1500 of its 2000 employes in war shipping operations will be canceled today. About 500 of the jobs to be saved are in this city.

The notices were supposed to go into effect tonight. But only 500 will and there's no chance whatever for them to be canceled at a later date. Congress finally has approved a resolution to continue ship operating functions of the commission until next March 1. This authority was to have expired today and Maritime was forced to send out the provisional notices to protect itself.

However, this is the day when furlough notices to 1100 administrative people here will become effective. A budget cut approved by the House forced the slash. An appeal has been made to the Senate to restore the cut. Also, this is the day when the lockout ends for the 2800 Maritime employes here. Neither Congress nor the commission can be proud of the cold-blooded lockout which cost 2800 employes a week's pay.

OHE: About 340 of the 800 employes here in the Office of the Housing Expediter will get 30-day layoff notices tomorrow. Notices to between 1000 and 1100 employes in the field service were sent out last week. All these employes worked on what was known as the veterans housing program.

By the way, OHE officials say they have no plans whatsoever to make a big layoff in its 6400-man rent control staff. The agency has requested funds of Congress to carry the staff intact through the 1948 fiscal year. But the forceful housing lobby is certain to work for a big budget cut.

NLRB: Officials in this agency want it plainly understood that no new employes will be hired immediately. Also, that all non-legal people will be hired through Civil Service. And finally, that the expansion, when it does come, will be gradual.

The NLRB, it seems has been deluged with job seekers because of its contemplated expansion to carry out the Taft-Hartley law. But the agency won't start to hire until it has funds approved by Congress. It'll probably have 2000 additional people a year from now.

STORY: In the personnel office of the Second Army at nearby Fort Meade, Md., are two girls whose names are Boss and Foreman.

STATE: Even if it gets all the money recommended by the Senate, this department must cut off 100 or so additional employes. However, nothing immediate is planned. The officials are living on these hopes—that the House will approve the Senate restorations in its budget, and that lapses and turnover will prevent another layoff here.

It's clearly possible that some few layoff notices now out will be canceled, and that an equal or greater number will be ordered fired in other offices because of budget restrictions.

VA: Three employes of the Veterans Administration here will retire today. They are: Dr. Ealla R. Fales, 72; Robert S. Nichols, 70, and Ruth Gist, 70.

Elson Backs Youth Draft From Pulpit

If It's Right in War, It's Right to Avert War, Says Pastor To Presbyterians

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

The spiritual implications of approaching Independence Day keynoted sermons yesterday in Greater Washington area churches.

Dr. Elson

Dr. Edward L. R. Elson voiced approval of peacetime military conscription and praised Dr. John Witherspoon, only clergyman to sign the Declaration of Independence.

"If it is right to train for military action after war begins, it is right to do so if the motive is to avert or shorten the war," said Dr. Elson, former Army chaplain and pastor of the National (Covenant-First) Presbyterian Church, 18th and N sts. nw., and added:

"War does not begin with the shooting. War is the manifestation of sin in society and we all live under the amenities and penalties of a warring order. War is the over-expression of covert force. I say this, loathing war's nasty and ugly nature."

Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of Foundry Methodist Church, 16th and P sts. nw., urged worshipers to keep faith with the war dead by leading dedicated Christian lives.

Addressing a commemorative service for members of Foundry Church who died in World War II, Dr. Harris warned that "an America in which moral self-control is at an all-time low ebb" is not keeping faith with the men who died to keep America free.

He deplored the fact that "America is spending eight billion dollars a year for alcoholic drinks" while "five million American children are without adequate school facilities because there is not enough money for teachers."

The Rev. Robert E. Lee, pastor of the St. Luke Lutheran Church, Colesville Road and Highland dr., Silver Spring, said today offers as many opportunities for "spiritual greatness" as the days of the American Revolution.

"Looking over the present world picture," said the former Navy chaplain, "it is not because we have failed in the direction of social progress. On the contrary, we have been making social progress more rapidly than, as individual persons, we have been able to handle it."

Meanwhile, some sermons stressed the need of application of Christian precepts to meet pressing problems of today.

The Rev. J. Raymond Nelson, pastor of Bethesda Baptist Church, Moorland lane and Wilson blvd., in his sermon said he regretted that many people are making a "poor showing" for the Christian cause.

Rev. Nelson

"Perhaps it is unwillingness," he said, "to accept the responsibility involved; perhaps procrastination, in enjoyment of worldly pleasures for a season; perhaps the failure to plan wisely and budget time and energy so as to respond to Christ's claims; perhaps failure to recognize how important it is, or what is the real advantage of living for Christ over living for self."

Speaking at First Baptist Church in Alexandria, Dr. Ernest F. Campbell declared:

"You and I live in a world of great problems and deep needs, but the world, with its problems and needs, need not discourage us. Our task is to call forth out of ourselves all the resources God has invested in us, and to do our best with what we have where we are.

The Rev. Edgar W. Beckett, pastor of First Methodist Church, Hyattsville, spoke of Christianity as "a rainbow of promise."

"Whether you rise or fall in this matter of living," he said, "is going to be conditioned largely by whether or not you can see that rainbow—can see beyond all the blackness."

The imprisonment of Representative James M. Curley of Massachusetts and former Boston mayor, drew pulpit comment from the Rev. William B. Adams, pastor of Rockville Baptist Church and former Army chaplain.

Rev. Adams

"The actions for which he has been accused are un-Christian and because of the influence of his position it sets a very bad example for the generation of high school age," he declared. "Such actions make our youth lose faith in our national leaders and encourage juvenile delinquency," he added.

In Washington

Official Seat At Cathedral Given Bishop

The Right Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill, Episcopal presiding Bishop, yesterday acknowledged action giving him an official seat at the Washington Cathedral.

In a letter to the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Bishop of the Washington Episcopal Diocese, Bishop Sherrill recognized an amendment to the Cathedral Foundation's constitution as follows:

"The presiding Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States of America shall be ex-officio the honorary president of the (cathedral) chapter. As presiding Bishop, he shall be entitled to the Seat in the Cathedral provided for the holder of that high office and he will be entitled to use the Cathedral on occasions incident to his office."

Washington Cathedral was designated as the Seat of the presiding Bishop by action of the General Episcopal Convention of 1940 and of the Cathedral chapter. This action, however, was only in the form of a resolution.

The presiding Bishop's offices are at the headquarters of the National Episcopal Council in New York City.

Seventh-Day Adventists End Session

The largest Seventh-Day Adventist camp meeting since the war closed last night in Takoma Park. Approximately 2000 persons attended the 10-day encampment.

Speakers at yesterday's services were Elder E. F. Koch, pastor of the Richmond Seventh-Day Adventist Church; Elder N. S. Ashton, pastor of the Sligo Church, where the sessions were held; G. M. Mathews, secretary of the Educational Department of the Columbia Union Conference, and Philip L. Knox, astronomer and evangelist from Los Angeles.

Twelve candidates were baptized during yesterday morning's devotions.

Highlights of the camp meeting were a resolution of protest against the proposed World Calendar which would affect the days of the historic week; induction of eight young people into various grades of the denomination's progressive classwork program, and scenes made through some of the world's largest telescopes shown by Astronomer-Evangelist Knox.

Fifty churches in the District of Columbia, Virginia and Prince Georges Counties, Md., were represented at the conference.

19 Children Hurt On Straw Ride Near Annapolis

Annapolis, Md., June 29 (AP).—Joseph Stanson, 18, one of 19 Baltimore school children injured when a truck in which they were taking a straw ride crashed into a tree and upset near here, remained in serious condition in the Annapolis Emergency Hospital tonight.

Stanson suffered a fractured skull. Frances Goenings, 13, suffered a back injury. Four others were treated for shock, and 13 others were given first aid at nearby taverns and homes.

Eastport County police said the truck, en route yesterday to Crystal Beach, failed to negotiate a turn.

Snake Cult Meets Under Police Eye

Stone Creek, Va., June 29 (AP).—With two of their members facing 15-day jail sentences and $50 fines on charges of handling poisonous snakes at religious rites, cultists in the Stone Creek section of southwest Virginia gathered here again tonight for services called by their leader, Paul Dotson.

State police again were stationed at the Shrine of Divine Healing—scene of last week's faith demonstrations where snakes were fondled—with orders to seize and kill any reptiles appearing at the rites.

Centennial Is Observed At St. Peter's

Bishop Dun Speaks As Poolesville, Md., Parish Celebrates 200th Anniversary

The centennial of St. Peter's Episcopal Church and the 200th birthday of St. Peter's Parish were celebrated yesterday in Poolesville, Md.

More than 300 worshipers heard the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Bishop of the Washington Episcopal Diocese, address the morning service at the celebration.

The prelate reminded his audience that the church is not just a physical structure "but the hearts and souls of people united together for the common good under the Lord's influence." The Rev. Herbert Jukes, rector, introduced the bishop.

In the afternoon, following a luncheon in Poolesville High School, the crowd saw Mrs. Frances E. Poole Williams, aged descendant of Poolesville's founders, unveil a memorial plaque on behalf of the Montgomery County Historical Association. The plaque was formally accepted by Col. Philip Huntington, a vestryman of St. Peter's.

The role of the Episcopal Church in Maryland's history was praised by former United States Senator George L. Radcliffe, president of the Maryland Historical Society, in the afternoon ceremony. Bishop Dun gave the dedicatory prayer.

St. Peter's Parish was once known as Eden Parish, honoring the Colonial Governor of Maryland. The original parish church was known as Monacy Chapel and stood on the site of what is now Beallsville, three miles from Poolesville. Monacy Chapel was in use as a chapel from 1847 until 1862, when Northern troops occupied it, and the building fell into disrepair.

St. Peter's is in the Washington Diocese. Until 1895, when a separate Washington Diocese was created out of the District and part of Maryland, St. Peter's was in the Maryland Diocese. In colonial days, up until the Revolution, the Maryland Episcopal parishes were under the Church of England.

Rise in Liquor Sales Blamed On Neighbors

Richmond, Va., June 29 (AP).—A spokesman for the Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board expressed the opinion today that Virginians seemed to be getting the blame—or credit—for a lot of drinking being done in North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, West Virginia, the District of Columbia, Maryland and several other States.

That's the explanation given by the ABC spokesman for the sharp increase in State ABC store sales for the first three months of this year.

He pointed out that total ABC sales rose 24.68 per cent in January-March, 1947, the State's first three months after formal rationing ended over the similar period of 1946, and that elsewhere sales volume declined.

But, to get the complete picture, he said, it must be recalled that prior to last January nobody but Virginians, plus military personnel stationed in the State, could get ration books to buy in State stores.

This barrier was dropped January 1 and anybody over 21, sober and not otherwise legally barred, could again become an ABC customer regardless of his residence.

That a lot of people from outside Virginia did come into this State and buy liquor was made plain, the spokesman said, by increases in border-zone stories near Washington, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and North Carolina.

Reasons suggested by the ABC spokesmen for the attraction of the Virginia stores were:

The Post Poll

Many in Area Favor Action to Check Russia

Many Washington-area residents believe the United States should take an active part in either halting Russian expansion or preventing the spread of communism in Europe.

Those favoring United States action, however, disagree widely on the measures they favor.

Eighteen per cent of this group back the Truman doctrine; 15 per cent support financial aid only for relief and reconstruction, while others urge "selling democracy" through education and information. Ten per cent bluntly ask that troops be sent to Europe to forestall Russian expansion.

Twenty-two per cent of all greater Washington residents interviewed by The Post Poll think the United States should stay out of this whole aspect of European affairs.

Local residents were asked:

"What would you like to see the United States do in Europe?"

They were then shown a card with the following choices, and answered:

	All Groups	Education Grade	High	College
	22%	35%	22%	13%
Stay out of European affairs	22%	35%	22%	13%
Take an active part in preventing the spread of Communism in European countries	36	12	39	47
Take an active part in keeping Russia from controlling more countries	43	37	44	45
Do something else (most usual suggestions: cooperate with Russia; work through U.N.)	7	2	5	14
Uncertain	9	19	8	4

More of those with Republican leanings advocate staying out of European politics than do Democrats or independents.

The group in favor of United States action were asked:

"In what ways should the U. S. take an active part?"

They replied:

Back the Truman proposal
by sending financial aid to small countries to be used for both relief and military purposes	18%
Send financial aid to small countries for relief and reconstruction only	15
Use education and example to sell democracy and stop communism	13
Send troops to Europe to forestall Russian expansion	10
Take action through the U. N.	7
Take the most severe measures, even if it means war	4
Maintain a strong Army in this country to be ready for emergencies	3
Maintain an intelligence service in Europe	2
Get tough with Russia diplomatically	3

Pilot, Brother, 13, Killed in Crash Near Luray, Va.

Luray, Va., June 29 (Spl.).—A 20-year-old amateur pilot and his 13-year-old brother were killed near here today, when their small plane crashed and burned on a farm in an attempted landing.

The victims were identified by Page County authorities as Howard Gray, the pilot, and his brother, Louis. They were trapped in the wreckage of the plane when it crashed on the farm of Harry Weekly, several miles west of Luray, bursting into flames.

Weekly, who saw the crash from the porch of his home, said Howard, the pilot, apparently attempted to land in a pasture, but the plane lost flying speed as it circled the field at about 11:15 a. m. He said the plane suddenly nosed downward and burst into flames as it struck the ground.

Friends said Howard, who worked for the Norfolk and Western Railroad in South Carolina, had come home for the weekend, and had taken his younger brother for a ride in the small, two-seater plane.

Residents Air Views on Soviet Expansion, Advance of Reds

Residents interviewed by The Post Poll were assured their names and opinions would not be divulged. Comments presented here were obtained in spot interviews in the downtown area.

We should cooperate with Russia but not concede to all her demands, is the opinion of Jules Sims, a Capitol Theater musician.

Sims

But the next move is up to Russia, as we have cooperated to a great extent already, he declared. "If the United States and Russia can't reach an agreeable solution as to the rehabilitation of devastated countries, then the United States should do its part in rehabilitating the section we control in Europe."

Sims, who lives at 5919 14th st. nw., believes that Russian expansion in Europe and the spread of communism could be checked if we do all in our power to aid small European countries without causing us to suffer economically.

* * * *

"We should definitely try to stop Russia from spreading communism in Europe," asserted Charles Price of 1906 G st. nw.

Price

"It can be done, Price said, if we send financial aid to small European countries in need of it. He feels, however, that the money should be used for relief and rehabilitation purposes only, and not to build military strength.

Price, an accountant with the Sheriff Motor Co., declared that we have cooperated too much with Russia already. He favors maintaining a strong Army here and an intelligence service in Europe.

Miss May Thomas, a Railway Express Agency clerk, would like to see the United States stay out of European affairs, but "doesn't think it's possible."

Miss Thomas

"We should try and settle all controversial issues through the United Nations and do our best to avert another world war," she said, "but we should be fully prepared."

Miss Thomas, who lives at 2814 30th st. ne., feels that the spread of communism in Europe and Russian expansion could be stopped if the United States would send more troops to Europe.

* * * *

A Marine Corps private first-class believes the United States should "rule with an iron hand" to stop the spread of communism in Europe.

Pfc. Maurice A. Schwaller, Field Artillery Training Battalion, Quantico, Va., declared:

"Russia isn't cooperating with us. There doesn't seem to be anything more we can do with Russia. We've tried our best."

Pfc. Schwaller

He believes the best way the United States can help solve the European situation is for us to send money to small European countries for relief and military purposes.

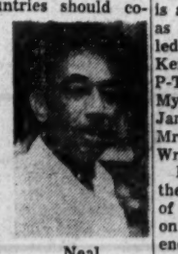
A former Army Ground Forces soldier who served in Casablanca and on the Anzio beachhead believes that countries should cooperate, but feels, at the same time, that there will be another world war in 1948.



Neal

The former soldier, Guy Neal, of 1321 S st. nw., now a maintenance man at O'Donnell's Sea Grill, feels that the United States should send troops over to Europe now so "that we can be ready for the next war." "We have got to stop Russia from dictating its policies to other European countries," he declared.

Miss Reva Haga, a waitress, who lives at 1131 Euclid st. nw., said the United States should take an active part in European affairs by aiding smaller European countries.

Miss Haga

"If we help devastated countries to rehabilitate themselves, we can check communism from spreading all over Europe. The countries that receive our aid will try to follow democracy to show their appreciation," she declared.

"In this way we will not only be helping them to thelp themselves, but we will be helping them to help us," said Miss Haga. "We will find this policy more beneficial in the long run than a policy of minding our own business."

Va. ABC Board Ends Rationing of Whisky

Richmond, Va., June 29 (AP).—The State Alcoholic Beverage Control Board announced today that on Tuesday the few items remaining on the liquor ration list will be removed.

This means that Scotch, Irish and Canadian brands which have been on an informal rationing basis of a bottle-a-day since January 1 may be purchased as available up to the legal limit of a gallon per purchase just as are other liquors.

Growing stocks of these heretofore comparatively scarce items and assurance from supliers that replenishments will be coming in substantial quantities were cited by ABC officials as making possible the final removal of ration limits.

Tuesday will be the first day since late fall of 1942 that ABC whisky has been completely unrationed in Virginia. The formal, coupon-book style of rationing instituted in 1943 was abandoned January 1, 1947, and most ABC wares have been ration-free since then.

Charlottesville To Be Host to 7th President

Charlottesville, Va., June 29.—President Truman, who will deliver a Fourth of July speech here, will be the seventh President of the United States to visit this university town in the last 62 years.

The President will speak at Monticello in ceremonies commemorating the 171st anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

Most frequent of the previous Presidential visitors to Charlottesville were President Truman's predecessor, Franklin D. Roosevelt and Theodore Roosevelt.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt often visited his son, Franklin D., jr., while the latter was a law student at the University of Virginia. On July 4, 1936, he visited Monticello for the first time, addressing more than 4000 persons at the shrine of Thomas Jefferson.

Theodore Roosevelt maintained a hunting lodge at "Pine Knot" in Albemarle County near Esmont and often came to this city. On one occasion, he addressed a banquet held in the rotunda of the University of Virginia.

The string of Presidential visits began in 1885, when Grover Cleveland spoke to a huge gathering on the lawn of the university. The first Democrat to hold the Nation's top office since Andrew Jackson, his visit was made the occasion of a giant Democratic rally.

William Howard Taft was a visitor of Charlottesville early in the administration of Dr. Edwin A. Alderman, first president of the University of Virginia, and was a guest in his home while delivering a series of lectures at the university.

Woodrow Wilson was a frequent visitor to his alma mater, often dropping in for week-end stays with his college mate, the late Dr. Richard H. Dabney. An ardent football fan, he frequently attended practice sessions at Lambeth Field.

Calvin Coolidge spent a portion of one day here. He attended Thanksgiving services at the First Baptist Church and was a spectator at the holiday football game between Virginia and Georgia. He also paid a brief visit to the home of the late Maj. James Dooley in the Blue Ridge Mountains.

Cox Dedicates D. C. National Guard Armory

More than 1000 persons attended the dedication of the District of Columbia National Guard Armory at 20th and East Capitol sts. se. at 5 p. m. yesterday.

Certificates of gratitude were presented as part of the program to the National Guardsmen who marched to war in 1942.

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, Commanding General, in the principal address, said:

"I dedicate this building to the glory of God and the use of the District of Columbia National Guard."

Armory Flag Raised

The Armory flag then was raised as the 257th Army Ground Forces Band played the "Star-Spangled Banner."

General Cox expressed the hope that wheen the building was not in use by the National Guard for training and military purposes it would be used for various civil purposes and "give happiness."

"This is the second time in the history of the National Guard, going back to more than a century, that it has had its own armory," he said.

"In 1859 Congress appropriated money for an armory for the guard, then called 'militia'. In February, 1861, the organization moved into its new building, and in April moved out for Civil War duty."

Recalling that the traditinos of the guard go back to the Georgetown Artillery Company, which participated in the French and Indian Wars, Col. Edward J. Geesen, acting chief, National Guard Bureau, told the units standing in formation: "We know you will meet your responsibilities just as in the past."

Appearance Praised

The appearance of the units, charged with the responsibility of "guarding the Nation's No. 1 spot," was praised by Brig. Gen. Claude E. Ferenbaugh, commanding general, Military District of Washington.

"While engineering and architecture built the armory, its foundation is in the spirit of our government," William E. Leahy, D. C. Director of Selective Service, said.

Lieut. Gen. LeRoy Lutes, Director of Service, Supply and Procurement, War Department General Staff, took the review with General Cox, at the latter's invitation.

A minute of silence for departed members of the National Guard was observed during the ceremonies, at which certificates of gratitude for World War II service were presented to those of the 2500 veterans present. Individual certificates have been prepared for each D. C. veteran guardsman and are available.

Auto Liability Rates Boosted In Maryland

By The Associated Press

An increase in automobile liability rates in Maryland for all types of automobiles was announced yesterday by the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters in New York.

Maryland is the forty-first State where rates have been advanced since February.

The overall increase amounts to 5.9 per cent for bodily injury and 34 per cent for property damage. Private passenger car rates for bodily injury are increased by 7.9 per cent and for property damage 30 per cent. New commercial car rates are up 40 per cent for property damage with no change for bodily damage.

Bureau spokesmen said the cause for the increase was the effect of inflation on the cost of claim settlement.

Maryland police have reported a sharp jump in accidents leading to property damage claims, and an increase of 1.3 per cent in bodily injury claims. In April and May total Maryland accidents were up 8.3 over the corresponding period in 1946.

(In the District, increased liability rates for property damage and bodily injury became effective February 17. Virginia liability rates are not affected as rates there are controlled by the State Insurance Commission.)

(On May 1, automobile fire, theft and collision insurance increased as much as 44 per cent in the District and Maryland, the increase depending upon the make of car, its type and age.)

Slimming Set Ups

Shorts Not for Thighs That Are Bony or Bulging

This is the eighth of a series of 10 articles on summer slimming.

By Ida Jean Kain

IN the good old summer time, bathing suits and shorts are many a gal's waterloo. And it's not only the plump lassies who are left out on a limb. Skinny girls look far from fetching in play togs.

Frankly, it's the thighs. They bulge out at the sides or hollow in, depending on weight and whether there is a tendency to slender or stocky limbs. Overweights tend to have heavy thighs and underweights to have skinny thighs. Well, calories control the weight, but exercise shapes the thighs.

To prove it . . . the frontline of the thigh is always firm because these muscles are used in walking, and getting about generally. The inner and outer thighlines seem to be a dead area, muscularly speaking, for they get so flabby.

A Thigh Trimming

KINESOLOGY, the science of muscular movement on which all calisthenics should be based, reveals that movement of the limbs in a circular manner combining abduction or movement of one thigh away from the other toward the side; and adduction, drawing the thigh inward. It's called rotation, but we'll call it swing. These inner and outer thigh muscles are also used in flexing the knee, so here's an exercise program, based on science. It's a perfect set of thigh-liners for overweights, underweights and normal weights . . . because exercise normalizes.

First, an up and in swing . . . standing in good posture, arms held out in front of body, shoulder level, and held about two feet apart. Now, swing, and touch right toes to left fingers, then left toes to fingers on the outstretched right hand. Do not lower the hands! Swing rhythmically for about 15 counts . . . to music if you wish. Then make it tougher by moving your arms farther apart; that is, back toward the shoulders. Swing!

Make circles, first with knee straight, making side circles from the hips, swinging over to the side, up in front, out to the other side and around. Circle six times in one direction, six in the other. Reverse and swing with the other leg. Then bend one knee and describe wide circles with the point of the knee, six to ten times in one direction, then in the other . . . wide circles. Then describe circles with the other knee point. Concentrate on the muscles you are trying to tone and put a curve on the swing!

Machine Needs Oil

If the sewing machine makes strange noises and creaks and groans, try to recall when it was last oiled. That may explain the racket.

A Faux Pas at Table

Never lift the goblet or tumbler to the servant to be refilled when dining out. The goblet remains on the table and the maid brings the pitcher to it.

Your Questions On Homemaking

Can you recommend the proper method for cleaning a Chesterfield covered with antique velour?

Certain upholstery fabrics can be "shampooed" at home, but velour and other pile materials are not among them. When such upholstery becomes soiled, it requires professional attention. Many of the firms listed under "Furniture Refinishing and Repairing" in the yellow section of your telephone book will send an expert to your home to clean upholstery.

If your Chesterfield is not badly soiled, the necessity for thorough cleaning can be staved off for some time by regular care. Brush the exposed surfaces every day or so with a whisk broom or upholstery brush. At least once a week, run the brush attachment of the vacuum cleaner slowly over all exposed surfaces. Once a month, use the slender suction nozzle and run the vacuum brush over the entire surface of the davenport, including the fabric underneath.

I have a lovely Navy blue leather handbag. Red fingernail polish was spilled on it. I would like to know what to use to take it off and still keep the gloss on the leather. I would also like to know how to brighten a Navy blue straw hat. E. H.

Since leather is easily ruined, the safest procedure would be to take your handbag to a leather cleaner. However, fingernail polish can sometimes be satisfactorily removed from leather by sponging with polish remover, then quickly washing with a cloth dipped in warm water. This should be followed by an application of saddle soap.

If your straw hat isn't faded, but just looks dull and lustreless, you may be able to renew the gloss by going over it lightly several times with a cloth dipped in alcohol. Or you can brighten it by brushing it lightly with a thin coat of clear, colorless shellac, diluted about half-and-half with alcohol.

Is it practical to dye printed slipcovers? Mine are of sailcloth, printed in beige, white, and burgundy. I want to dye them solid burgundy. Can you recommend a home method for this, or is it necessary to have the job done professionally? V. P. G.

The printed designs in these slipcovers would undoubtedly show through even though you dyed them a dark shade of burgundy. There are a number of reliable dyes on the market, but dying the covers at home would be quite a job. They would have to be boiled in a dye bath to insure a deep, dark color. If you want to have them dyed professionally, it would be wise to take a pillow cover or sample of the material to the dyer's and talk the matter over with him first.

Cuddle Your Baby, Doctors Say

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Luckily for babies, mothers are receiving from every source these days, encouragement in handling and loving them and in soothing their crying. We have, in a sense, returned to the practices of those days when mothers knew nothing scientific about the care of babies, but possessed a deep and abiding sense of their responsibilities toward them.

Now, we have scientific proof of the advantages of loving, protective care. Babies should not be allowed to cry long and hard in order to convince their mothers they are hungry. They should be fed when they are awake and ready to be fed. Babies should not be allowed to cry just to show them who is boss. The child who has to cry to get attention learns only to cry. He has to put forth every effort to get someone to notice him and even if he is punished (and there are cruel parents who do not hesitate to chastise even small babies), this is attention and they continue to cry for it.

Babied Babies Best

THE BEST BABIES are those whose parents are willing and ready to pick them up, to soothe them, to sing and cuddle and even walk or rock them, if they need it. They become so thoroughly convinced that their parents are right on the job and they can depend on them, that they do not need to exert themselves to get attention.

The baby who has to cry, cries. He is unhappy, frustrated, feels neglected and abused, and he can never be satisfied. Satisfaction comes from what is done for a baby, not what is denied him.

All of this has been proved by hundreds of studies made on the newborn baby. The result of these studies has been broadcast so mothers will no longer be influenced by the person who says, "Let him cry it out." She will be convinced that she will help her baby to enjoy a comforting sense of well being when she gives him the loving attention every baby must have. She will establish wholesome relations between herself and her baby and develop his sound, psychological health.

Mothers who have had the courage to test these methods with their own babies are ready to proclaim their effectiveness. So instead of spoiled babies they have good babies!

Town Talk—

By Eva Hinton

GAY AND sprightly Mrs. Blair Childs is always on the lookout for an excuse to give a party and she finds plenty of them. She will give parties for her friends' visiting mothers, or even for their mothers-in-law, and her parties are always fun.

The other evening Mrs. Childs entertained at dinner to say good-by to lovely Mrs. Kent Legare, who is leaving to spend the summer at the Legares' place in Connecticut. Someone remarked that the quotation, "Parting is such sweet sorrow," must have been invented for the departure of a very best friend who is sure to return soon.

Such is the case with Mrs. Legare. She will return to her attractive apartment with the first cool days of Autumn. So the good-bys were far from sad.

Mrs. Albert Dewey also was saying good-by that evening before leaving for boat-conscious Edgartown. She reported that her husband is in New York working himself into a sea-going mood by shopping around for a boat.

Dauntless Mrs. Arthur Fowler was another guest of Mrs. Childs that evening. I call her "dauntless" because last winter she was invited to go somewhere in a private plane and she stepped right into the plane and went without even a hat or a coat!

And Mrs. Loring Christie was there too, looking as chic and soignee as if she didn't work all day at the State Department and keep house for her mother, and in her spare time search for a house to buy in Georgetown. Also present was Mrs. Thomas Shevlin, who has just moved to Washington.

Among the men dining at the Childs' that evening were Arthur Krock who can tell a subtler and more amusing story than anyone I know; Columnist Joe Alsop, also known for his wit; good-looking Representative Thurston Morton of Kentucky, and Col. Ian McAlpin, who can show a kilted knee and sing a bonnie song with the best of 'em!

CRIME and Punishment Department. Talking with a law student recently the conversation turned on the merits of punishment as a deterrent, as well as a means of retribution. The student pointed out that in medieval times the punishment for pickpockets was hanging.

He also informed us that some scholar has made a study of all available data on crime in that epoch and has discovered that pickpockets plied their trade most industriously among the crowds watching the hanging of other pickpockets.

Miss Whitten Engaged to Mr. M'Cracken

Mr. and Mrs. Francis S. Whitten of Washington and Three Valleys, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Francine Lewis Whitten to William Lewis MacCracken, son of Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken of Washington.

Miss Whitten made her debut in Washington in December, 1944, at a dance at the 1925 F Street Club, and also at a tea at the Sulgrave Club. She attended Potomac School in Washington and Foxcroft in Middleburg, Va. She is a provisional member of the Junior League.

Mr. MacCracken was graduated in 1942 from Wassookeag Preparatory School in Dexter, Me., and had one year at the University of Pennsylvania before entering the United States Naval Submarine Service in which he served in the Atlantic and Pacific theaters from 1943 to 1945. He has just returned from the University of Arizona, having completed his college education. This summer he will enter George Washington University to study for his law degree.

Colemans Visiting Oakridge, Tenn.

Mr. and Mrs. George Gravatt Coleman and their 3-year-old granddaughter, Eugenia Gaye Roddis have left for Oakridge, Tenn., to join Eugenia's parents, Lieut. Comdr. Louis Roddis, jr., USN, Mrs. Roddis, and their 2-year-old daughter, Louisa Lee Roddis. They will also make the acquaintance of the newest member of the Roddis family, Gravatt Keith Roddis who was born June 25.

Mrs. Roddis is the former Miss Mary Eugenia Coleman. She was graduated from the National Cathedral School and made her debut in 1940 at the home of her parents and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Evans Mauldin. She will spend the summer in Washington which has been the home of her family for three generations.

Jocelyn Freer, Norman Keith To Be Married

Robert E. Freer, Commissioner of the Federal Trade Commission, and Mrs. Freer, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Jocelyn Freer, to Norman Clinton Keith of New York and Washington. The news was made known at a luncheon for Miss Freer's close friends yesterday at the Army-Navy Country Club.

The bride-elect, who is attending George Washington University, made her debut in Washington at the Washington Club on Christmas Eve, 1945. She was presented to New York society the following season at the Debutante Cotillion. Miss Freer is the granddaughter of the late Edward P. Barry of Boston.

Mr. Keith is the son of Clarence Lynwood Keith of Boston, and the late Mrs. Keith. He is a graduate of Springfield College and the Harvard School of Business Administration. He is president of the Petroleum Export Co., with offices in New York, Paris and Washington, and a member of the board of directors of the Griffith Consumers Co. of Washington.

Mr. Keith served in World War II as a lieutenant in the Navy. His clubs are the Metropolitan, University, Sulgrave and Chevy Chase.

Guests of honor at Mrs. Freer's luncheon for her daughter were three recent brides—Mrs. Robert Dudley, Mrs. Jean Pierre Gabriel and Mrs. Grayson Headley.

Others there were Mrs. Philip Hevenor, Mrs. Lawrence Jacobson, Mrs. Lawrence Smith, Mrs. George Clarke, jr., Mrs. Francis Hildebrand, Mrs. Thad Brown, jr., Mrs. Phillips Clarke, Mrs. Prescott Gatley, Senorita Anita Bararibar, who played Cupid in the matchmaking; Miss Jane Lingo, the Misses Elenita and Dorothy Dyer, Miss Grace Clagett Roberts, and Alice Freer, younger sister of the bride-elect. Alice told the news with a small white satin box decorated with hearts and inside two rings tied with a white satin band with the name of the bride-to-be on one side, her fiance on the other.

British Visitors Feted; Armours Entertained

By Marie McNair

Lord and Lady Elton, visitors here from England, shared honors with a compatriot yesterday at the party given by Mr. and Mrs. Norman Littell. He was Desmond Harmsworth, diffident young artist whose portrait of the Rt. Hon., the Lord Inverchapel, British Ambassador, was on view yesterday for the first time since its completion on Tuesday.

Lord and Lady Elton and Norman Littell with Mrs. Littell, were at Princeton together last week for the Rhodes Scholar reunion, first since 1933, and it took little persuasion to get the Eltons to come to Washington. Lord Elton, one of the leading Laborites of Great Britain, succeeded to the office of Secretary of the Rhodes Trust, from the late Lord Lothian, one-time British Ambassador to Washington.

The Littell's cocktail party was given at their home in Arlington, Va., in the garden of their pillared fieldstone house surrounded by trees.

Armours Find Friends

There was another party going on yesterday at Wardman Park, with Edward Tomlinson, noted radio commentator entertaining for the new Assistant Secretary of State, Norman Armour and Mrs. Armour. As a quondam Ambassador to Argentina and Chile, Mr. and Mrs. Armour remembered many of the Chiefs of Mission of the Latin American countries who were among the guests yesterday.

Since returning to Washington a week or more ago, Mr. and Mrs. Armour have been staying with friends, but they hope to have their own house within the fortnight.

But I'm a bit ahead of myself.

It was a friendly, informal party that Mr. and Mrs. Littell gave, with fond parents bringing their young offspring to play with the Littell's young Norman, jr., and their daughter, a charming child whose name escapes me just now.

There were Senator J. William Fulbright—he's an Oxonian—and Mrs. Fulbright, with their pair of pretty daughters in identical blue frocks, whom they put aboard the train last night for camp. Lady Garthwaite brought along Michael William, who romped with patient, good natured Shep and Lassie, two magnificent collies.

Mr. and Mrs. Harmsworth had their daughter, teen-age Margaret, with them. Oxford graduates had been urged to come yesterday to meet the new secretary of the Rhodes Trust; and to meet the artist and see his work.

Artist Catches Likeness

The painting, an excellent likeness, was unveiled with a short speech by the host who has known Desmond Harmsworth since they went to school together at Christ Church College.

The son of Cecil Harmsworth, Undersecretary of State for Foreign Affairs under Prime Minister Lloyd George, Desmond Harmsworth is the nephew of Lord Northcliffe and Lord Rothmere, leading publishers for many years.

In 11 days the artist wrote "finis" to his portrait of the Ambassador, whose ruddy Scots face looks up from a white summer suit, blue shirt and a slip of bright pink paper in his hands.

Others gathered in this erudite company were William Ziegler, of the Defense Homes Corporation, and Mrs. Ziegler; Karl Karston, secretary of the Rhodes Trust, and Mrs. Karston; Gen. and Mrs. James McCormick, Mrs. Charles McNary, Judge and Mrs. Richard Disney, Mr. and Mrs. William Trowbridge, Clarence Streit, headliner of "Union Now;" William P. Maddox, chief of the division of training services of the State Department, and Mrs. Maddox; Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Ansel Mowrer, Mrs. Alexander Bowley, Mrs. Claude Beddington, making use of her shooting stick; Mr. and Mrs. Critchell Parsons and Shepherd Jones.

The tall, handsome blond youth was Dr. Karl Becker, one of the few anti-Nazis to escape persecution, who is leaving soon to return to Germany.

The "little print frock"—summer requisite for the party-goer, was everywhere yesterday. Mrs. Littell wore one of floral design in pastel colors. Lady Elton's had a predominant shade of rose to match the flower on her hat, and Mrs. Armour's was a cool looking black and white in geometric pattern. With it she wore a spray of white lilacs forming a halo effect for a hat.

"She speaks Spanish like a native" said pretty Senora de Belt, wife of the Cuban Ambassador who came to greet, the Armours.

She was speaking of Mrs. Armour, who is Russian born, the former Princess Myra Koudacheff. "It's strange", she went on, "but Russians—not this generation—were usually linguists." And it's even stranger that Mrs. Armour speaks English without a trace of accent.

Vallarinos to Sail

The Brazilian Ambassador, Carlos Martins, was there, but if Mme. Martins was with him, she was somewhere hidden in the crowd.

I saw the Honduran Ambassador, Dr. Julian Caceres, a glass in one hand and gesticulating with the other. Costa Rica's Ambassador Francisco Gutierrez, and Senora de Gutierrez, were smiling their way about the room. The Panama Ambassador J. J. Vallarino, in immaculate white suit and Senora de Vallarino, in black and white, brought news that they're sailing for London in September. The Ambassador will attend the Monetary Conference, and after that they're looking forward to two weeks in Paris, another fortnight in Spain.

Senora de Ivanissevich, wife of the Argentine Ambassador, in a towering black hat, was in earnest conversation by the buffet; the Peruvian Ambassador, Jorge Prado, was in a circle, while Senora de Prado and Senora de Caceres, were in a group in the sun room to escape the heat.

The Mexican minister and Senora de la Colina, came in, and still others were the Uruguay Minister and handsome Senora de Mora; Senator Arthur Capper, the Haitian Ambassador, Joseph Charles; Vice Admiral and Mrs. W. H. P. Blandy, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Col. and Mrs. Sherlock Davis and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Elliston.

Employer and His Wife Address Secretary, 23, By Her First Name, While Referring to Each Other as Mr. and Mrs. Blank; Girl Is Annoyed

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Will you please address a few words in your column to those employers and wives of employers who address secretaries by their first name, but persist in referring to each other as Mr. or Mrs. Blank.

I am 23 years old, the daughter of a professional man, and I trust not wholly lacking in dignity, intelligence and self-respect. My employer is in his late thirties, his wife perhaps a few years younger. If they were a generation older than I, one might attribute this practice to a sort of paternal or maternal attitude toward me. As it is, I feel that I am being relegated to the servant class.

I was never consulted as to my preference, and frankly I can't very well say anything by way of objection. Surely our modern office relationships could do with just a bit more formality in regard to the personal address; but if we must have this first-name calling, it ought at least to be reciprocal, in the interest of the secretary's self-respect. Sincerely yours. S. C.

Her Ideas Have Victorian Base

DEAR S. C.: Are you one of the last of the Victorians, perhaps? From the premise of Victorian etiquette, there would be warrant for your theory that Mr. and Mrs. Blank are making a class distinction in calling you Sophie, while stressing the formal prefix for themselves.

According to the Victorian creed of refined address, a married couple deriving from the upper middle stratum of society were supposed to speak of each other as Mr. and Mrs. Blank when conferring with tradespeople or servants. Discoursing with persons of their own rank, the more relaxed term, "My wife" or "My husband" was in order. With close friends, each referred to the other by first names.

These gentlefolk might address the butcher, the baker or candlestick maker as Mr. Zilch, but they called domestic help by first name or surname, without prefix—as Jane for Jane Doe the parlor maid; or Brown for John Brown the coachman.

An exception might be made for the housekeeper, depending upon her genealogy. Given solid ancestry, she might be addressed or designated as Mrs. Grimm. Also the governess—who had of course to be genteel—equally rated a Miss when spoken of or to.

New Deal Started Less Formal Trend

BUT assuming Mr. Blank employed female help at his place of business 50 years ago, such help was addressed by the formal prefix, I believe—for instance, as Miss Prim or Mrs. Bleak, whether she kept books or swabbed the floors.

This formal address in office relations obtained almost without exception in our social order until the era of the "New Deal" was ushered in by Franklin D. Roosevelt, whose genial practice of using the first-name address on a grand scale, which incidentally included loyal valued office staff, spread like wildfire through most other Government offices.

Thence it fanned out into private enterprise, via the carrier medium of civilian executives who were recruits to Government service during the war years and got in the habit of addressing office help by first name, regardless of sex.

Girl's Complaint Echoes Loneliness

THIS personalized tone toward staff met no resistance, but rather approbation, from the army of wartime secretaries whose first job experience was in Government. How do I know? The subject was extensively aired in this column some years ago, after a ruffled wife protested the trend as a threat to family life.

Secretaries answered in chorus. They called her jealous without cause and defended the first name address as a tonic to self-respect. They said it gave them a feeling of "working with" a friendly leader. I've seen several of these Government - trained secretaries switching to civilian jobs the last year and in each case the girl asked her new employer to call her by first name.

So, as said to start, maybe you're a Victorian at heart, out of tune with your times. But, honestly, I don't think it's that. I think you're stuffy with a sense of personal consequence; edgy about wanting the deference you feel is due your father's daughter; yet probably rather starved for social diversion—hence nursing a frustrated yen for something closer than a hireling relationship to your employer.

M. H.

National Weather Summary

Copyr., 1947, Edw. L. A. Wagner

TWENTY-FOUR-HOUR FORECAST—Cool, sea breezes will bring some relief from the heat, by Monday afternoon in coastal areas, and northerly winds will be cooling the Great Lakes region and North Central States.

Hot, sweltering weather will continue through the South, however, in the Southwest, through the Tennessee Valley and along the Eastern Seaboard northward to Boston.

It will be coolest in sections north and west of the cold-air front which extends from eastern Canada through the Great Lakes to the Plains States. Also, in the eastern Lakes Region which is coming under the influence of the cool northerly air flow.

Weather fans in northern Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and western New York may be interested in watching how the approaching cold front (see fotocast) checks the mercury rise in their locale. Buffalo's maximum temperature will not exceed 74 degrees, according to the forecaster; it will be only 78 at Cleveland. But, further East there will be readings in the 90s at Washington, Philadelphia, Hartford and Boston.

Mild 70-to-80 degree thermometer readings will prevail from San Francisco eastward to Chicago in the north Central and Northwestern States. Readings will be 90 to 100 degrees from Texas eastward to the South Atlantic Coast.

Overcast skies appear limited to sections of New Jersey and Illinois. It will be partly cloudy over most other States, except in the Southwest and North Central sectors of the U. S. (Cloudy and clear areas are shown on the inset map.)

Thunderstorms and rain showers will occur at scattered points over the affected areas pictured on the fotocast, being limited to New England, Florida, the Middle Atlantic States, the frontal zone and northern Rockies.

Bond Profits Pay Virginia Highway Debt

Richmond, Va., June 29 (AP).—The Commonwealth of Virginia will pay off on Tuesday the last of a 25-year-old highway indebtedness—and pocket approximately $180,000 "profit" on the operation.

The amount due and payable Tuesday is $478,000 of principal and $4780 in interest, or a total of $482,780.

But the story of the "profit" is somewhat more involved and shows that the State took $4,784,524 in appropriations, paid off $5,428,000 of highway certificates and had the $180,000 left over.

This neat financial slight of hand was not an overnight performance, but was achieved over a period of 15 years by the State Sinking Fund Commissioners and W. L. Young, veteran deputy State treasurer and secretary of the Sinking Fund Commission. A substantial part of the earnings was realized by transactions in Government bonds, bought and sold during the war years.

The commissioners say Young, whose long experience in the business of investing State funds really paid off in this field, is due much of the credit for the government bond transactions in which a substantial part of the earnings was realized.

In brief, this is how the State did it. The sinking fund bought heavily in all of the war bond savings drives, purchasing at par long-term bonds for which banks and certain other investors were ineligible at the time of issue. The banks, however, wanted these issues and were willing to pay the State a premium for them whenever it was willing to sell.

The State fiscal authorities, after going into a huddle with Federal Reserve Bank officials on the propriety of the course, decided that this was a sound method of earning money and proceeded to go through this procedure over and over, reinvesting principal and premium in other issues, which subsequently were sold to other investors—always at a premium.

Young said he had not broken down the earnings as between premiums and interest, but that the premiums were "substantial."

Keller Fights To Have Name Put on Ballot

Paul J. Keller, candidate for election to the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors, revealed yesterday he had appealed to the attorney general of Virginia in an effort to have his name included on the ballot for the Democratic primary August 5.

Keller, disqualified by the local Democratic committee because he lacked a sufficient number of qualified voters on his petition of candidacy, said he had asked Attorney General Abram P. Staples to issue a ruling as to whether he could submit a "supplementary" list of qualified voters indorsing his candidacy.

Keller said the Democratic committee's announced deadline for filing notice of candidacy was actually a day earlier than legally required. As a result, he said, he was forced to "rush" preparation of his petition to meet the deadline.

George Robey, chairman of the Democratic committee, set May 5 as the deadline for filing, although in other sections of the State, May 6 was accepted as the official filing date.

Keller said he had written the attorney general to determine if he could submit a list of additional indorsers in view of the fact that the "erroneous date" forced him to complete preparation of his petition without having ample time to investigate the eligibility of his signers.

To date, four candidates for public office in the county have been disqualified because of failure to file on time or because they lacked sufficient signatures on their petitions.

This month some smart Americans will pocket an extra

$61,700,000

(are you one of them?)

THE PEOPLE getting all this money aren't a bunch of millionaires.

They're farmers, riveters, clerks, motormen, secretaries, lawyers, grocers, doctors–all kinds of people.

But they do have one thing in common. Ten years ago this June and July, they bought U. S. Savings Bonds. They had the horse sense to hang onto their Bonds. And now, they're getting a sweet cash payment from Uncle Sam!

As these people will tell you, U. S. Savings Bonds are probably the safest, soundest, most sensible way the average American can save.

AND–

You can buy them now through the Bond-a-Month Plan at your bank.

Once you start, your money is set aside for you–regularly and automatically. It mounts up steadily–and fast. In just 10 years, you'll get $4 back for every $3 you put in.

If you do, in 10 years you'll get your share of Savings Bond Payments!

Save the easy, automatic way—with U.S. Savings Bonds

Swing to Right in U. S. and Opposing Trend In Europe Is Genuine Cause for Concern

By Drew Pearson

"The District Line" by Bill Gold is being suspended during Bill's vacation.

Recently I noticed two editorials in Osservatore Romano, the Vatican newspaper which expresses the unofficial views of Pope Pius XII when he doesn't want to be quoted directly and which warned of the increasingly dangerous rift between the United States and Russia.

Now whether you agree with the Vatican or not, it remains a fact that the European leaders of the Catholic Church have to face the practical problem of living in Europe if possible without war raging round their heads. Much as the church hates Russian communism, its leaders also see the United States drifting steadily to the right and Europe drifting steadily to the left—with a clash eventually inevitable.

Of course, when people are hungry in Europe they are bound to see red and swing to the left. And when people are prosperous in the United States, they become self-satisfied and swing to the right. And the problem on both sides of the Atlantic is to prevent the pendulum from swinging too violently. When it does, people get hurt.

People Get Hurt

A lot of people got hurt after the last war during the Harding-Coolidge back-to-normalcy era when we zoomed to unprecedented prosperity and then crashed into depression. And for my money Paul Hoffman, head of Studebaker, was absolutely right the other day when he said our system couldn't take another such violent swing as that which we suffered in 1929-32.

Hoffman

A lot of people also got hurt in England during the general strike of 1926. Labor had taken too many liberties, people were sore at labor, and a Conservative British government not only broke the strike but practically wiped out the coal miners' union.

But the British pendulum swung too far, so that, three brief years later, labor was back not only with all its strength regained, but with the conservative government sitting outside No. 10 Downing Street looking at a Labor government on the inside.

We in the USA, therefore, might take a lesson from England about labor extremes.

We Once Fought Fascism

You don't have to sit in the more distant vantage point of the Vatican to watch certain significant swings of the pendulum in this country. As one who makes it a business to watch Washington rather closely, I can't help seeing a lot of them.

One took place inside the Administration Committee of the House of Representatives the other day when it came to publishing a Library of Congress report on fascism.

Fascism, as I recall it, is something we were supposed to have been fighting only two short years ago. It was something which Mussolini established, and which Hitler copied under another name, and which the war lords of Nippon aped. We vowed to defeat it, and did.

But when Congressman Wright Patman of Texas had the Library of Congress prepare a report on "Fascism in Action," certain Republicans, aided by a few Democrats, moved to keep that report bottled up in committee.

At the latest meeting, Democratic Congressman Tom Pickett of Texas moved to publish the report on fascism, but the Chicago Tribune's GOP Congressman Fred Busbey of Illinois objected. He had already forced a revision of the report making it more palatable to Spanish Dictator Franco and his Church supporters. Furthermore, Dr. Ernest Griffith of the Library of Congress, who was present at the meeting, promised to include the text of the Nazi-Soviet agreement.

Finally, on a vote of 9 to 6, the committee ducked. It voted to pass the buck to the full House of Representatives and let it decide whether the report on fascism should be published. Since one vote in the House can stop it, this means no publication.

Now this report on fascism, taken by itself, is not so important. In fact, many consider the report ineffectually written. However, it represents a trend—a trend toward forgetting some of the things we were fighting for.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

The Bridge Deck

By Florence Osborn

Today's Hand

Neither Side Vulnerable
SOUTH DEALER

	♠K 7 3 ♡J 10 9 ◇A 9 7 ♣K 10 7 4
♠Q J 10 6 5 ♡K 8 5 ◇Q 8 2 ♣A 3	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠9 2 ♡6 4 3 2 ◇10 5 4 ♣8 6 5 2
	♠A 8 4 ♡A Q 7 ◇K J 6 3 ♣Q J 9

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Q ♠.

After ducking opening lead, South wins his game by taking an unusual diamond finesse, which sets up the suit and at the same time keeps West out of the lead. He takes the second round of spades with the king and leads a club, West winning the ace and knocking out declarer's last spade stopper.

Now declarer can count only eight sure tricks: two spades, three clubs, two diamonds and one heart. A finesse of the heart jack or diamond jack will produce the ninth trick, but neither play is safe, for if West wins he will cash his long spades to set the contract.

South's best play is to try to set up a third diamond trick, and he may be able to do this if he can lose the first round of diamonds to East. He leads the three of diamonds from the closed hand, and when West follows small he finesses dummy's nine. East wins the ten and shifts to a heart. Declarer goes up with the ace, refusing to finesse, and lays down the ace and king of diamonds. West's diamond queen drops on the last lead, setting up declarer's diamond jack for his ninth trick.

South makes his three no-trump contract, losing a trick in each suit. Declarer's handling of the diamonds will give him three tricks, even with an unfavorable diamond break, if East is forced to win dummy's nine with the queen.

Growing Jimmie

My Jimmie has been growing as . . . The months have wandered by . . . And now at only 13 years . . . He is as tall as I . . . He probably will get to be . . . Much higher than his dad . . . And if he does you may be sure . . . That it will make me glad . . . I know there is a problem when . . . It comes to buying clothes . . . And height accounts for other ways . . . In which the money goes . . . But he who stands above the crowd . . . It's easier to see . . . And usually his measurement . . . Contributes dignity . . . And while I wish my eldest son . . . Would fill the shoes I wear . . . I really hope his own will be . . . A more becoming pair.

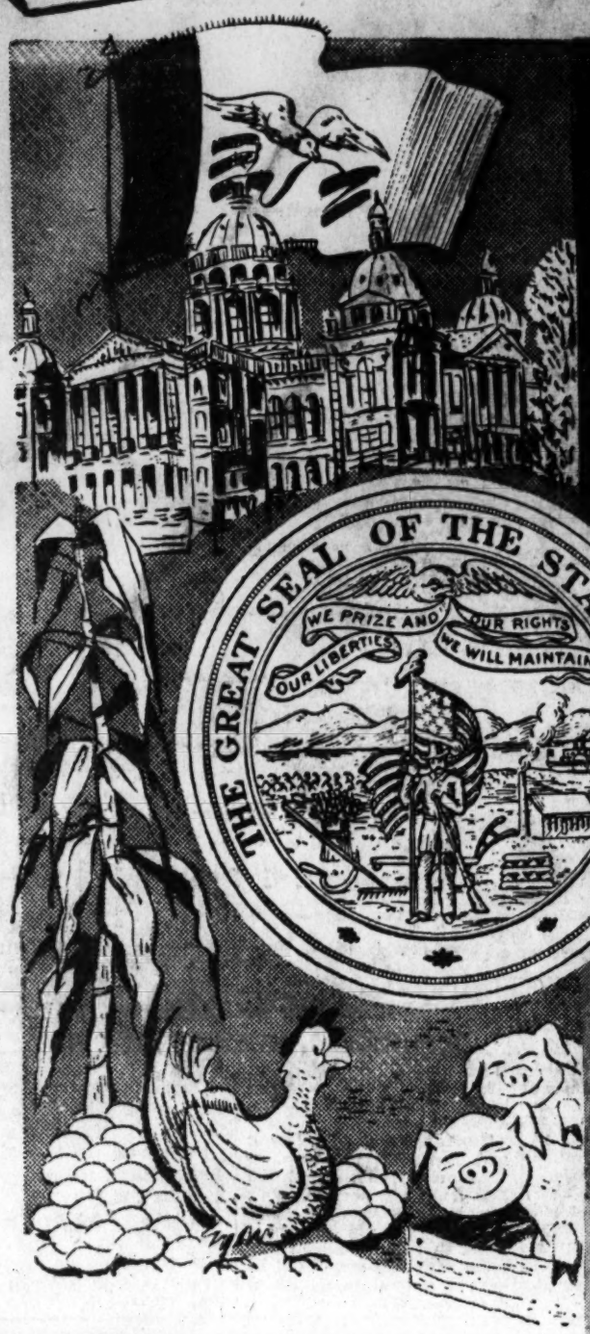
A GREAT STORE IN THE NATION'S CAPITAL



Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper . . . practiced law in Cedar Rapids . . . elected to Iowa Legislature in 1934 . . . served as Lieutenant Governor and Governor of Iowa . . . member of United States Senate since 1944.

THE HECHT COMPANY SALUTES THE CITIZENS OF WASHINGTON WHOSE HOMES ARE IN

IOWA . . . America's breadbasket

"A good land and large, a land flowing with milk and honey," might have been written expressly of Iowa . . . who last year commemorated one hundred years of progress as a State . . . Her people, the majority living in small towns and farm homes, have arrived at a high level of prosperity, based solidly on agricultural output and mining and manufacturing industries . . . They can claim the highest degree of education in the country—a literacy percentage of 99.3—and this standard is being maintained by her sixty colleges and universities and fine public school system. Iowa, land of the yellow maize, whose deep and fertile black soil is abetted in production by the long summers of good growing weather with their sixteen-hour days. Not satisfied with present agricultural achievements, the State College is conducting extensive experiments in hybrid corn. Iowa serves as one of the great bread baskets of the world, sending large quantities of her good food abroad through American relief programs. We thank The Hecht Company for giving us this opportunity to express our wish that in aiding to rebuild the starving and broken bodies of our gallant allies, we may also help to rekindle their hope and faith in democracy . . . a form of government which leaves its people free to share their abundance with less fortunate friends.

Bourke B. Hickenlooper, President,
Iowa State Society

IOWA . . . Out where the tall corn grows . . . in some of the most fertile soil in America or the world. Whose people, while building up their farms, have still found time to develop thriving manufacturing and mining industries.

IOWA . . . Discovered in 1673 by French explorers Marquette and Joliet . . . subsequently was under the flags of France, Spain and Napoleonic France until acquired by the United States with the Louisiana Purchase . . . settled in the first half of the nineteenth century by sturdy North European stock. Iowa attained statehood in 1846.

IOWA . . . Queen of the prairie . . . whose rich, black soil stretches for miles on end, flat as a table. A deep and uninterrupted furrow was once plowed straight as a die from Iowa City to Dubuque.

IOWA . . . One of the world's great food producers . . . with twenty-four firsts, ten seconds, and six thirds in United States agricultural production. Corn growing is in a class by itself. The State is also first in hogs and beef cattle . . . chicken and eggs . . . horses . . . popcorn . . . and oats. Iowa contains twenty-five per cent of "Grade 1" farm land in the country . . . cultivated by the world's most prosperous farmers.

IOWA . . . Processes the food she grows . . . and, in addition, her factories turn out washing machines, farm implements and fountain pens. The State is high in coal mining . . . and first in manufacture of pearl buttons in the Nation. Des Moines is one of the insurance centers of the West . . . and little Council Bluffs is fifth in the country as a railroad terminal.

IOWA . . . whose people have the highest literacy rate in the country, with a percentage of 99.3 . . . fostered by state and privately endowed colleges and universites. The first newspaper was published in the Hawk-eye State in 1836. Iowa is now first in publication of farm journals.

IOWA . . . Has contributed richly to an American culture . . . giving Emerson Hough, Herbert Quick, Susan Glaspell, Ellis Parker Butler, and Ruth Suckow to literature . . . Grant Wood's paintings of his native state to art . . . inspiration to Dvorak for his "New World Symphony" . . . and Buffalo Bill to legend.

IOWA . . . Whose citizens happily admit "All I owe, I owe Iowa." We must conclude the rest of the country owes her a great deal, too.
